DUKE AND WALLY WED JUNE 3

NO ROYALTY BIDDEN TO NUPTIALS

Monts, France, May 18 (INS)—With no member of the British royal family in attendance, the Duke of Windsor will be married to Mrs. Wallis Warfield on June 3, it was officially announced today.

Choice of June 3 as the wedding date came as something of a surprise. This was the birthday of the late King George V. whom the duke succeeded as sovereign of the British Empire on his death in January of 1936.

Brief and unequivocal the wedding announcement put a final stop to all speculation regarding the possible attendance of members of the royal family at the nuptials.

It was made by Hermann L. Rogers of New York, an old friend of the duke and Mrs. Warfield, who has been acting as contact man with the press since the Baltimore beauty left England just before the duke's abdication and took up residence in France.

CEREMONY AT CHATEAU

Both the duke and Mrs. Warfield are at present at the chateau.

"His Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor announces that his marriage to Mrs Wallis Warfield, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Teakle Wallis Warfield of Maryland, will take place at the Chateau de Cande at Monts on Thursday, June 3.

"Regarding invitations to the wedding:

"Invitations to the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield will be confined to those who have been with them during the past month. No member of the royal family will be present."

This was interpreted as meaning that invitations would not even be issued to the royal family as a matter of form and that none of the close associates of the duke, such as Lord and Lady Mountbatten, would be asked to attend.

Rogers said Mayor Mercier of Monts would be present, indicating he will perform the ceremony. He said there would be less than 25 guests, and mentioned specifically only the Rogers, Baron and Baroness De Rothschild, Mrs. D. B. Merryman, aunt of Mrs. Warfield, Lieutenant Dudley Forwood and other aides of the duke.

He Blasts Trees ---And How!

Fairfield, Ct., May 18 (INS)—Mr. John Passo, expert dynamiter, removed a tree stump from Mr. Lacy Blackman's lawn in fashionable Brooklyn today. The removal of the stump was premeditated.

The partial demolition of one (1) house, one (1) automobile and complete demolition of window panes—quantity estimated at X (X)—for blocks around, was not premeditated.

But if Mr. Passo goes in for meditation, Fairfield police have given him the opportunity by booking him in.

It seems that Mr. Passo tried one stick of dynamite on the tree stump, and the result was no dice. Mr. Passo tried a couple of sticks together and still no dice.

Mr. Passo is not one to take defeat from a tree stump, and with a dangerous glimmer in his eye he placed 21 (count 'em) sticks of dynamite at the base of the old stump and let her rip.

And rip she did!

With a whoosh and a bang that could be heard for miles around, the stump went stratosphering. Parts of it coming down with bullet velocity crashed through the roof of a parked car.

Parts beat a tattoo on the wall of a house, and what the stump didn't damage the repercussion did. Glass fell on Brooklawn like stars fell on Alabama.

When the first excitement was over police quietly took Mr. Passo into custody and went in search of his employer. They are dusting off the statutes and ordinances for charges.

Garrett Faces Court, Goes Unrecognized

Unrecognized in the same court where he was once a well known figure as a prosecuting officer, Oliver B. "Ollie" Garrett, former Boston police liquor squad czar, appeared in Roxbury Court today as a defendant.

He was charged with keeping a barking and unlicensed dog at his garage on Ruggles street, Roxbury.

Failing to recognize Garrett, whose activities during the days of prohibition were "front page" news, Judge Albert F. Hayden learned his identity only by asking routine questions.

"What is your name?" asked Judge Hayden.

"Garrett," came to reply.

"Oliver B. Garrett."

Garrett then requested a two weeks' continuance, stating that the dog was not his but that the owner was now in Connecticut and is expected back in about two weeks. Judge Hayden granted the request continuing the case to June 1.

The complaintant was Betty Stevenson of Dempster street, Roxbury.

Still Sneezing After 4 Months

Crossville, Tenn., May 18 (AP)—Little Bertha Mae Turner, 12, still is sneezing after four months, but the rate has dropped from a high of more than 4000 sneezes a day to a mere 20 or so. She is so weak that she remains in bed most of the time.

TORCH SUITOR CLEARED IN SLAYING

New York, May 18—Furious because she was "deceived," blonde Helen Tiernan tried to involve her swarthy lover in the "babes in the wood" murder today but confessed at last that she alone was guilty.

It was to make room in her tawdry flat for hapless George Christie, she admitted, that she hacked and burned her seven-year-old daughter, Helen, to death on Saturday at Brookhaven, L. I., and tried to murder her five-year-old son, Jimmy.

Again, in the flood-lighted glare of the police lineup, she faced him and repeated that confession.

Linked with her in a homicide charge, they were taken together to Suffolk County for arraignment, but in the state police barracks at Bay Shore she suddenly relented.

"DID IT ALONE"

District Attorney L. Barron Hill of Suffolk quoted her:

"I did it all alone. He didn't have anything to do with it.

"I just found out that Christie was married all along. He's got a wife somewhere and he's been stringing me along. I got pretty sore at him.

"That's why I tried to drag him

Hurley Backs Probe of Radicals

Governor Charles F. Hurley announced today that he would sign a bill that would establish an 11-man commission to investigate activities in Massachusetts of "Communistic, Fascist and Nazi organizations."

The measure would direct the commission to study particularly the sources and methods of propaganda for the organizations, and what means, if any, the state "should take to combat and destroy the spread of such un-American doctrines."

Loud Speakers For Use of Pope

Castel Gandolfo, May 18 (AP)—Pope Pius today ordered loudspeakers placed in the public audience chambers of his villa to magnify his failing voice.

Due to a heart condition, prelates said, the Pontiff's voice has been failing after only a few minutes and only pilgrims close by can hear him. He received Cardinal Pacelli and several other prelates today.

JUDGE QUITS, COURT PLAN REJECTED

Just before the Senate Judicial Committee in Washington today voted 10 to 8 to report President Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill adversely to the Senate word reached Capitol Hill of the resignation from the High Court of Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter.

The effect of Justice Van Devanter's action created considerable comment in official circles. Members of the Senate Committee, however, said his resignation had no effect on the voting. All compromises on the court plan were rejected.

Washington, May 18 (AP) Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter announced today his retirement from the Supreme Court, effective June 2, thus clearing the way for President Roosevelt to make his first appointment to the high bench.

The 78-year-old Justice, who has served 26 years in the court, made known his intention in a letter to the President.

Mr. Roosevelt immediately wrote a brief acknowledgment in long hand, extending to the jurist "every good wish" and inviting him to call at the White House before he leaves Washington.

PRESIDENT REPLIES

The President's letter said:

"My Dear Mr. Justice Van Devanter:

"I have received your letter of this morning, telling me that you are retiring from regular active service on the bench on June 2, 1937.

"May I, as one who has had the privilege of knowing you for many years, extend to you every good wish.

"Before you leave Washington for the summer it would give me great personal pleasure if you would come in to see me.

"Very sincerely yours,
(Signed)
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

SUITOR ACCUSED, THEN CLEARED IN TORCH SLAYING

WIDOW ADMITS SHE WAS ALONE IN CRIME

into this. I thought I could get even with him for what he tried to do to me."

Even this statement police were inclined to doubt, for in the police lineup Christie—George Christodulus is his real name—insisted he was single.

He denied all part in the crime, gave an iron-clad alibi that he was at work on Saturday when the "babes in the wood" murder was carried out, and marshalled 27 witnesses to support this story.

Assistant District Attorney Joseph Arata of Suffolk said when asked if Christie would have to face prosecution as a result of his paramour's story:

"I doubt it very much. It doesn't look that way."

FACES DEPORTATION

According to Police Captain Thomas Dugan, in charge of the alien squad, Christie admitted he had jumped ship and entered this country illegally in 1928. In the lineup he denied that, however.

Nevertheless, Dugan asked the Federal Department of Labor for a deportation warrant which will be forwarded to the Suffolk County authorities for use if necessary.

Detective Frank Naughton, acting on a hunch, broke the gruesome mystery 48 hours after a 18-year-old high school girl, Mae Savage, found Helen's mutilated body lying beside her injured brother in a thicket near Brookhaven.

QUICKLY CONFESSES

Nabbing Mrs. Tiernan as she came to the West Side day nursery, to say the children were being removed, he quickly got a confession that she had committed the crime.

Christie was brought in to confront her, and hours later, after being shown her little boy's bloody shoes, she babbled hysterically that her suitor egged her on and helped her commit the slaying and assault.

Because of her story, he was booked on charges of homicide and felonious assault, and fingerprinted.

"I did not. I never done that." he mumbled over and over, and her exoneration of him bore out his claims to innocence.

When first taken to the West 47th street police station, Mrs. Tiernan readily admitted to detectives she had taken her children on a picnic. She said a strange man had interrupted their lunch and had attempted to attack her.

She ran, she said, when she saw the strange man run into the woods with her children under his arms.

But under questioning, she made her first confession. Still showing no emotion and occasionally smiling, she said:

"I wanted to kill them but I didn't want to hurt them. I took a knife from the kitchen on the picnic with me. I took the children into the woods after getting off the train at Brookhaven, L. I. Then I did it. I cut the little girl first. Then I cut the boy. Then I spilled gasoline over them and ran like the dickens."

Police said Mrs. Tiernan left her two-room New York city apartment with her children and was driven to the Pennsylvania Railroad station with a friend about 9 a. m. Saturday. Then, they said, she bought a ticket for Brookhaven and got on the train with the children.

In her first dramatic confession, Mrs. Tiernan reportedly said:

"Sunday morning I took Jimmy and Helen to the Pennsylvania station and bought a ticket to Brookhaven, Long Island.

"I had determined to put them out of the way. We were crowded in the flat. There wasn't enough room for all of us. So I decided the best thing to do was to put them out of the way."

CHILDREN HAPPY

"I didn't want to hurt them," she continued. "I took with me an ordinary carving knife from the kitchen.

"'We're going on a picnic, children,' I told them, and as they had not been out in the country before they were excited and happy.

"When we left the train I took them into a field near a road and we started to pick flowers.

"Then I did it."

It was no act of mercy which propelled her to drench James' body less than her dying daughter's, Mrs. Tiernan said.

She commented that she "hadn't brought along enough gasoline" for two human torches, according to police.

"I suppose I must have used more on Helen than on Jimmy. I didn't divide it equally between them after I saw how little I had with me."

Mrs. Tiernan insisted then that on one had aided her in the crime.

"Afterwards," she continued, "I went to Jones Beach where my friend met me and drove me back to New York City."

Jimmy is suffering from a four-inch gash in his throat, a brain concussion and numerous bruises and scratches. His eyebrows were burned off in a fluff of gasoline fire meant to destroy his body, but which somehow miraculously failed to.

Figures in Gruesome Torch Slaying of Girl

Mrs. Helen Tiernan, who confessed slaying her daughter, Helen, seven, because she and her brother, Jimmy, five "were in the way" of her suitor, is shown here with a friend on a bathing beach a few years ago.

George Christie, the "suitor" in New York's "Babe in the Woods" crime, who was first accused, then cleared by Mrs. Tiernan of accompanying her and the children into the woods.

His mumbling led to his mother and her arrest. Here is Jimmy Tiernan, who escaped the fate of his sister, but who was severely slashed, shown on a hospital cot, where in his delirious mumblings, he gave police the first clue to Mrs. Tiernan as being involved in the murderous attack on him and Helen, 7.

Widow and Suitor Fought Bitterly

New York, May 18—Even before the tragic denouement came, life had been stormy between Mrs. Helen Tiernan and her sweetheart, who today were linked in the most street, who took care of the two horrible slaying-story in years.

By a 17-year-old girl, Catherine McCann, of 524 West Forty-Seventh stret, who took care of the two children, victims of the ghastly "babes-in-woods" crime, it was revealed that Mrs. Tiernan and her alleged sweetheart, George Christie, frequently came to blows.

"He was a good looking fellow, but you could hardly understand him. The kids called him 'daddy.' He had a pretty strong temper. One time he was teaching Mrs. Tiernan a new dance step. She didn't catch on quick enough and they came to blows.

"He's a great big fellow and she's just a tiny thing, and he was rough with her. Often, though, this rough stuff was just play. When the kids cried he got mad at them and chastised them.

"Mrs. Tiernan and he went to night clubs all the time. I saw the favors they brought home. George seemed to have plenty of money. One time when I asked him what he did, he said he was a boxer; another time he said he was a dancer.

"But one night I remember he was in a bad mood. I asked him what he did and he got so mad I thought he was going to hit me."

Miss McCann said Mrs. Tiernan divided her devotion between her two children and her sweetheart. She said:

DEVOTED TO CHILDREN

"I can't imagine her wanting to hurt them. She seemed to love her children with devotion. She never complained about her first floor apartment being small.

"I know George spent a lot of time at the apartment because sometimes when he came she would send me home and say she wouldn't need me that night. She never spoke of being too crowded.

"George was a well-dressed man and wanted her to be well-dressed, too. He would bring her clothes. But I never saw her go out with George in evening dress. When she went formal she would always leave the house alone, telling me she was going to meet George.

"About two weeks ago George was complaining to me that he had been arrested for speeding in his blue car. He said he had to appear in court. But I never heard how it came out.

"No, I certainly wouldn't think Mrs. Tiernan would have done a thing like that. But you can never tell these days."

2 Get Probation In Bond Case

Rupert W. Marsters of Arlington and Edward A. Goggin of Dorchester, who had pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in connection with the transportation of a $10,000 bond stolen from a Kentucky bank, were each given a year's probation in federal court today.

The men had pleaded guilty at the trial of William J. "Big Bill" Corcoran, former Middlesex County district attorney. Corcoran was acquitted. Although the assistant U. S. attorney recommended that each defendant be given two years' suspended sentence, Judge Elisha H. Brewster remarked:

"I think I'll make it straight probation for one year on each of the two gentlemen."

Lift Operators Strike in Gotham

New York, May 18 (INS)—Disrupting elevator service and causing widespread confusion and inconvenience, building service workers in dozens of buildings in New York's garment center went on strike today at noon.

Most of the strikes were unauthorized by the Building Service Employes International Union.

Four Saved After Boat Capsizes

Haverhill, May 18—Four workmen on a $1,000,000 sea wall project here were rescued from the Merrimack river today in view of hundreds of spectators along the river bank.

Dana Brewster, 39, and Howell B. Smart, 42, both of Haverhill; Hazen B. Chamberlain, 30, West Newbury, and Edward B. Wharton, 57, of Somerville, were thrown into the river when a catboat they were using to reach a tug in midstream capsized.

The tug immediately rescued Brewster, Chamberlain and Wharton but Smart, clinging to the overturned catboat, was carried down stream.

Chasing after Smart, the tug sped by him, then turned around and came up stream. A member of the tug crew grabbed Smart as the catboat bobbed by in the river which was at flood height. None of the four suffered seriously.

Aluminum Workers To Strike Tonight

Alcoa, Tenn., May 18 (AP)—Fred Wetmore, president of the Aluminum Workers' Union at the Alcoa plant of the Aluminum Company of America, announced today that 3000 employes in the company's fabricating plant would strike at 10 o'clock tonight.

'HATCHET' GIRL, YOUTH, FLED CRIME IN CAR

Jersey City, N. J., May 18 (INS)—Pretty Gladys MacKnight, 17, and her "puppy love" sweetheart, Donald Wightman, 19, fled in the MacKnight automobile shortly after the girl's mother was slain with a hatchet in the kitchen of her home on July 31 last.

Testimony to this effect was given today by Dr. Thomas F. O'Brien, a dentist, next door neighmor of the MacKnights in Bayonne, at the trial of Gladys and Donald.

"Donald was at the wheel, Gladys at his side in the front seat," said Dr. O'Brien. "They backed out of the driveway. It was 5:40 p. m. The radio was playing in the MacKnight home at the time."

The murder of Mrs. Helen MacKnight occurred at approximately 5:30 p. m.

Arthur W Johnson, who lived in the other half of the MacKnight semi-detached house, testified that about that time he heard a struggle taking place in the MacKnight kitchen. He heard a loud scream, then a "suppressed" scream, and then an object fall. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Feury, called to Gladys through a window.

(Mrs. Feury previously testified Gladys said her mother had "cut her finger.")

Johnson described the condition of Mrs. MacKnight's body

EYSTER PARTY GIRLS SOUGHT

Police today planned to question girls who attended "sugar daddy parties" allegedly given by Loy Eyster, 61-year-old caretaker of the Squantum Lotta Crabtree estates, in their probe of the shotgun death of Monica Foley, pretty 22-year-old Roxbury girl.

The names of these girls were furnished them by Irene Danovan, of Dudley street, Roxbury, close friend of the dead girl, who said she often accompanied Monica as a guest at Eyster's chicken dinners.

"I knew Pop as well as Monica did and I was at several parties he gave for us," Miss Donovan told police. "She called them 'sugar daddy parties.'

"He was always calling her up and begging her to go down to see him. When she went down there he kept asking her if she had been going around with any other men. He called her several times during the summer and he was wild because he couldn't get in touch with her."

Only a day or two before she died, Miss Donovan stated, Monica said now that the weather was good "it was about time to pay 'Pop' a visit."

Shipyard Strike Delays U. S. Work

Kearny, N. J., May 18 (AP)—Approximately 2,500 employes of the Federal Ship Building and Dry Dock Co. left their jobs today—the employes calling it a strike and the company claiming the men were "dismissed."

SHUTDOWN THREAT IN STEEL CRISIS

Cleveland, May 18 (AP)—The Republic Steel Corp., in a statement today, said its plants would be shut and kept shut "until civil authorities clear the streets" in the event that picketing made it impossible for its employes to reach their jobs.

The steel workers' organising committee has threatened a strike against the company if it does not sign a bargaining contract.

Spokesmen for the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., against which CIO officials also have threatened a strike, said the same course would be followed by them.

"As near as we can tell," the Republic statement said, "our men want to work and we want them to work. However, if outsiders blockade the streets we will shut down and stay down until civil authorities clear the streets and make it possible for our men to return peacefully and without intimidation."

Republic Steel employs 52,000 workers, mostly in Ohio. It has plants in several other states, including Alabama.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube has 26,000 employes, mostly in the Mahoning Valley district surrounding Youngstown, O.

The two companies are important objectives in the attempt of the steel workers organizing committee to organize the independent steel industry.

CIO Opens Union Drive At Ford Co. Plants

Detroit, May 18 (AP)—The United Automobile Workers of America began mobilizing today for its campaign to unionize the Ford Motor Company.

First detailed announcements of the drive—against Ford's expressed opposition—named Richard T. Frankenstein as campaign leader and disclosed a plan for secret membership lists to "protect" workers.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president under whom Frankensteen was a chief lieutenant during General Motors, Chrysler and other strikes, said a "score or more of organizers" will be assigned to the campaign.

Enlistments of the Ford employes, Martin said, will be carried on through Detroit locals until a separate Ford unit is established. He and Frankensteen appealed to the "200,000 organized automobile workers in Detroit,, for aid.

Film Strikers to Picket All Chicago Theaters

Los Angeles, May 18 (AP)—Plans to picket "every theater in the Chicago area this week" were made by striking films craftsmen today in their campaign for a nationwide boycott. Effectiveness of the picketing was shown, officials said, by pleas they received from Southern California theater owners that the marchers be withdrawn.

The leaders declared they had no intention of withdrawing the pickets and were pressing their campaign in the larger cities.

ZEP FIRE STARTED INSIDE GAS CELL

Lakehurst, N. J., May 18 (AP)—The outbreak of the disastrous Hindenburg fire was definitely placed today inside gas cell No. 4 in her stern by a member of the crew who had all five tail gas cells in his line of vision when the first explosion occurred.

A brilliant light appeared inside the No. 4 cell simultaneous with the explosion, said the witness, Helmut Lau, a helmsman who was at his landing station in the lower vertical fin at the start of the disaster.

A short time after the bright reflection appeared, Lau told the Department of Commerce investigating board, he saw fire inside the forward bulkhead of the cell and then flames became visible on its outer surface.

GIVES VIVID ACCOUNT

Lau, who as Helmsman had charge of ballast, gas valves, engine telegraphy and water pumping installations, gave this vivid, matter-of-fact account:

"I was facing port when I heard a muffled explosion, and saw inside the gas cell a bright reflection. It was on the front bulkhead of cell number 4.

"The first fire I saw was on the front side of cell four. The bright reflection was from the inside.

"It was red and yellow. There was smoke in it. The cell did not burst. It suddenly disappeared from the heat.

"The flame became very bright and the fire rose up to the top, more to the starboard. I saw that with the flame aluminum and fabric parts were thrown up. The after part of the cell also caught fire.

"Parts of girders and molten parts started to tumble down from the top. It lasted only a fraction of a second.

"I jumped back to the girder where the telephone is. The ship was dropping rapidly.

"During the descent, it was very bright in the fin and during the descent I felt no heat. Parts of fabric and metal were falling down constantly. I was looking astern and down. The ship cracked to the ground with great force and I fell to the right. Freund (Hans Freund, a rigger, whose landing station was nearby) fell over me."

Find Veteran Dead

FEENEY Honored by 2000

NOTABLES AT SERVICES

Nearly two thousand persons filled St. Mark's Church in Dorchester and overflowed to the sidewalks today as a high mass of requiem was solemnized for the late John P. Feeney, former Mayor of Woburn and famed Boston attorney.

Dignitaries from every department of the state and federal offices, from various cities, towns and counties were among those who paid their final tributes.

After the mass a detail of state police escorted the long cortege to Woburn, birthplace of Attorney Feeney. Burial was at Calvary Cemetery in that city.

The funeral started from the Feeney home at 17 Melville avenue, Dorchester, with the following as pallbearers:

Mayor Edward W. Kenney of Woburn, former District Attorney Edward F. Flynn of Essex county, Attorneys Timothy F. Callahan, George Alpert, Michael J. Doyle and George J. McKelleget.

Notables Attend

Ushers at the church included Frank Pedonti, secretary to former Governor Curley and lifelong friend of the deceased; former Executive Councilor James J. Brennan, Attorney Joseph B. Abrams, Michael J. Meagher and Attorney Frederick G. Katzmann.

The solemn high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Francis Cummings, with the Rev. Augustine Dalton, deacon, and the Rev. Francis McElroy as sub-deacon. Prayers at the grave in Woburn were recited by the Rev. Charles Keaney of Woburn.

Whalen's mass was sung at the church services with Mrs. Edward Sullivan, St. Mark's organist, directing. The choir was comprised of Joseph Ecker, Paul McGrath and Mesdames Thomas Dolan, J. Maloney and J. Deyone.

Curley Present

Also former State Senator Henry Fitzgerald, president of the Boston City Council John I. Fitzgerald, former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, Major William G. Lynch, Clerk of Roxbury Court Theodore F. Glynn and fifteen delegates from the Chinese Merchants' Association.

Attorney Clarence Rowley, John C. Carey of the Carmen's Union; Thomas McInerney, John Martin, Thomas Callahan, former Representative Timothy Driscoll, Dr. T. J. Reardon, Representatives Timothy Murphy and Bernard Casey, City Councillor Clement A. Norton, U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin, Andrew Gorey, Mr. and Mrs. James Sisk, Leo P. Doherty, former State Auditor Francis X. Hurley and present State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, Henry C. Fielding, Arthur D. Cooper, William Kelly and Frank Farrara.

Deputy Superintendent John T. O'Dea and Captain Thomas Mulrey were in charge of the large police detail that directed traffic at the church.

Lost Elephant Found by Police

You may well believe police all over the circuit were a little stunned today when a state police teletype message clicked in, asking:

"Will you please find out where Tom Mix's Circus is playing. We believe they lost an elephant when it fell out of a van. He's in a field in Wilbraham."

This was quite a shock to Frank Lambert at state police headquarters, Commonwealth Pier, who sent out a message reading:

"Are you kidding?"

The answer came back that the sender certainly wasn't kidding and would state police please send troopers to the field and post a guard over the stranger.

This was done, and while folks of the circus were being notified at Worcester—where it's opening day today—state troopers were warily circling the Wilbraham field and hoping their new charge wouldn't take it into his head to want to move out before a mahout arrived.

Jewish Juniors Dance Tomorrow

A formal supper dance at Seiler's Ten Acres will mark the close of a very successful season of both the Dorchester and the Brookline groups of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies Juniors tomorrow night. The dance of the combined groups was planned by Sumner Rodman, chairman of the Dorchester Unit and Leon Strauss, Jr., chairman of the Brookline unit, assisted by Lawrence Kanters and Miss Thelma Huberman of the ticket committee.

DUKE Will Wed JUNE 3

ROYAL KIN NOT TO ATTEND

duke and Mrs. Warfield during the last month include only Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Bedaux, Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the former king, and a number of equerries and servants.

USES ROYAL FORM

It is traditional for some member of a bride's family to announce the nuptials under ordinary circumstances, but the sovereign head of a ruling family invariably makes public the marriage plans of any of his relatives as well as his own.

There was no indication in Rogers' brief announcement that the duke and Mrs. Warfield had sought or obtained sanction of the royal family for their union.

HANDS OUT COPIES

The general impression conveyed by the declaration was that the duke was exercising his prerogatives not only as an individual but as a ranking member of royalty by proceeding on his own initiative.

Rogers read the statement while standing in a driving rain at the gates of the chateau. Fifty French, English and American reporters were on hand, radio and sound newsreel men with microphones having been excluded.

The spokesman then handed out typewritten copies of the announcement, inscribed "Chateau de Cande, May 18, 1937."

FURTHER DETAILS LATER

Rogers refused to amplify the portion of the statement dealing with guests, but indicated additional details regarding this and details of the ceremony itself might be forthcoming tonight. He refused to confirm or deny reports that the duke's legal representative had conferred at Tours this morning with the attorney-general, who can authorize a civil wedding without bans.

When Rogers had finished, the reporters dashed from the driveway and raced through the woods, over fields and stone fences to their cars waiting below. Then ensued a mad race to telephones several miles away.

Duke Recalls Chef and Valet for June 28

Vienna, May 18 (INS)—The Duke of Windsor's Austrian chef and valet have been instructed to resume their duties June 28 at Wasserleonburg Castle, Austrian mountain retreat where the Duke and Mrs. Wallis Warfield are expected to pass a large part of their honeymoon, it was learned today.

It was believed here the Duke and Mrs. Warfield, after their wedding, will board a private yacht at a French port for a Mediterranean and Adriatic cruise and then motor to Wasserleonburg Castle from a Dalmatian port.

Lynn Girl Uses First Vacation Day to Elope

MRS. HERBERT S. BEARSE

Slipping away to Seabrook, N. H., the first day of her annual vacation, Miss Dorothy E. Rourke, Boston street, Lynn, was married to Herbert Sutherland Bearse of East street, Melrose.

The couple were attended by Miss Catherine Osborne and Chester O'Donnell, Seabrook friends. They returned today and took up their residence at Rockmere Gardens in Lynn.

Miss Rourke is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton J. Rourke, and is employed as an operator in the Lynn exchange, recently transferring from the commercial department of the company. She had been working in the Lawrence office for several weeks prior to the transfer.

B. U. Student Takes Poison to Bring Mother to Side

They called Dr. J. William Hite, of Park drive, who administered first aid and called for a City Hospital ambulance.

Young Howard told doctors at the hospital he had become despondent because he missed his mother and knew she would come to his side if he were in trouble. He said he was also worried over his finances and studies.

This prompted him to take the poison, doctors quoted him as saying.

Hospital authorities immediately notified the mother, Mrs. Emma Howard, of Monroe street, Chicopee Falls. She started for Boston on receipt of the news.

RULERS Revive Old CUSTOM

ACCEPT HONOR OF SUBJECT

The King and Queen planned to be among the 40 royal guests of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland at historic Hampden House tonight.

Two kings and three queens will be present, Britain's rulers, Queen Mother Mary, King Farouk of Egypt and Queen Mother Nazli of Egypt.

Other royalties will include the Duchess of Gloucester, the princess royal, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her husband, Prince Bernhard, and Prince and Princess Chichibu of Japan.

A special ballroom has been erected in the duke's garden and the ballroom on the first floor has been converted into a supper room for royalty.

Guard Parades

Early-rising American visitors for the coronation had a glimpse of Britain's old-time military pageantry today when the King's guard was mounted with full ceremony on Horse Guards' parade.

Five hundred troops, in gay full dress uniforms of scarlet and blue with tall bearskins on their heads, marched and counter-marched to the blare of brass bands as the colors of the regiment chosen for the day's duties at the palace were trooped before the whole parade.

The ceremony, a survival of the days when the palace guard always was publicly mounted on Horse Guards parade, will be continued daily until June 1.

Compensation Bill Passed by Senate

Payment of workmen's compensation to workers injured in industry under the workmens' compensation act will start on the day of injury, instead of after seven days from the time of injury, under a bill advanced to the engrossment stage today in the Senate by a roll call vote, 24 to 10.

During the debate, Senator Arthur F. Blanchard of Cambridge expressed surprise that some of the senators were worrying about additional costs to industry over the adding of the seven-day accident payment period when "expenses are mounting to taxpayers through welfare and old age assistance."

Cash Gone, Love Cut

HAYMOW FIRE ENDS TRIANGLE

Putnam, Conn., May 19 (INS)—Death today of George Gilbronson, 65, ended the rural eternal triangle which came to light when Gilbronson climbed into a haymow with a lighted lantern several weeks ago and was badly burned when the lantern overturned, firing the hay.

Routine investigation of the fire uncovered amazing circumstances. Gilbronson said he had been living with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Howe and paying court to the 24-year-old woman with her husband's knowledge and for financial considerations.

When his money was gone he was banished to the haymow, he said, and took along the lantern to keep warm.

Acting on his information, the Howes were arrested. Howe was sentenced to one year in jail for receiving the proceeds of immorality and Mrs. Howe went to the state farm for women.

Hit by 'L' Car

Struck by an "L" car while crossing Warren street near Grove Hall early today, Coleman Connelly, 37, of Peacevale street, Dorchester, was taken to the City Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain, lacerations of the face and head and possible internal injuries.

Beacon Hill Calls To Garden Lovers

Garden lovers were flocking today to Beacon Hill, were many flower-laden estates were opened for public inspection, according to annual spring-time tradition. Generally hidden from view by high walls, these estates were today open to the public under auspices of the Beacon Hill Garden Club.

Churchill's Kin Weds in France

Bayonne, France, May 18 (AP)—Marriage capped the "love and war" romance today of Esmond Romilly, 18-year-old nephew of Britain's Winston Churchill, and the honorable Jessica Lucy Freeman-Mitford, daughter of Lord Redesdale.

Their mothers, Lady Romilly and Lady Redesdale, attended the wedding in the British consulate

Damon Runyon

Dick Merrill, who is quite a man-about-tables in his leisure moments, used to sit around with us between his Miami-New York transport runs, and tell us that he could fly the mail between New York and London like breaking sticks, if he had the right kind of plane.

You never think of doubting Dick's statements about aviation, or what he can do. He makes them in a quiet, matter-of-fact manner that lends credibility to assertions that from another man might sound like idle boastings, or fantastic dreams. So when he used to tell us that he could fly the mail between the oceans like breaking sticks, we were pretty sure he could do it.

For several years, Dick's great ambition was to make the trip from New York to London and return within a few days, to prove his theory. He said that it was the one big feat in aviation that had not yet been performed, but his interest in it was obviously as a practicable commercial demonstration, not as a stunt. A commercial flyer himself, it is natural that Dick's interest in aviation should be mainly in the commercial phases.

A year ago, he had little hope of ever realizing his ambition. Ocean hopping in airplanes had become definitely assigned to the stunt class, and was regarded only as a useless risk of life, but unnecessary for any purpose. No one with money enough to help would listen to Dick's theory. We know, because we sounded out a number of prospects in an effort to further a friend's fondest desire. We were not especially interested in getting a letter to London speedily, but we like to see our friends have their dreams come true.

Dreams Come True

Then along came Harry Richman, the actor, with the money, and the yennion, as we say at the club, to make the New York-London round trip, and while it was mainly a thrill venture on Richman's part, and ended unhappily in rumors that we never tried to assay, the fact remains that it was largely successful, and certainly demonstrated the possibilities of Merrill's theory.

Some persons who cannot understand the spirit of adventure and derring-do that moves a man, and who have mighty little conception of the hazards of that leap across the water, were inclined to make small of Richman's part in the journey, and he received amazingly little credit for the exploit. But we are here to tell you that it required superior courage for a man of his material position in life, once across, and safe, and knowing the dangers of the trip, to make the return journey.

It cost Richman a lot of personal capital, and when in the years to come the big planes that are already being discussed as a result of Merrill's success, are riding high above the ocean weather packing the mail between New York and London, like breaking sticks, as Merrill said, the Broadway minstrel must be remembered as one of the trail blazers. And we think Dick Merrill will confirm this statement.

Money Complex

It was Bernard Smith, called Ben, who financed Merrill's recent hop. Ben Smith is a Wall Street financier, enormously rich, and not half as gruff as he looks. Not one-third, in fact. Indeed, Ben Smith is one of our favorite rich men, and usually we do not fancy rich men. They give us an inferiority complex.

Ben Smith got acquainted with Dick Merrill riding Merrill's plane on the Miami skyway. Ben Smith is one of those fellows who will not go around the corner except in a plane, and he liked Dick's idea of demonstrating the commercial practicability of the New York-London flight. For all we know to the contrary, Ben Smith may have a flotilla of mail planes in his backyard all ready to launch, now that Dick Merrill has demonstrated that the thing is a cinch. One thing about Ben Smith, he never yet has been found asleep at the switch.

He produced the plane for Merrill, and probably thought out the business arrangements that made the flight so essentially commercial that Dick and his flying mate, Jack Lambie, will probably make plenty out of the trip. So, commercially, the flight was a success in theory, and in the cash till, too.

Great Charm

Dick Merrill is Southern born, but he is by nature, and habit, a Broadway fellow. He does not drink or smoke, but he can put in as many hours in a night club as one of the performers. He knows everybody you can think of. He has a Southern accent, is unmarried, and quite bashful, and has great personal charm.

His confidence in airplanes is prodigious, and he went around with a stunned expression for weeks after he got caught off his course with a transport plane some time ago and had to make a forced landing in Pennsylvania, for which he recently received an ear-wigging from a government accident board. It was difficult for Dick to realize that such a thing could happen to him.

He makes about $1200 a month driving the Eastern Airways planes on the Miami run, lives at expensive hotels, dines well, and dresses right up to the nines. He is always denying romance, but the same pretty young lady is generally on the spot when Dick is taking off, or coming in from his more hazardous jaunts, so what do you make of that, Abercrombie?

They say that when Henry M. Stanley, a reporter on the old Herald, got back from his world renown exploit of finding the last Livingston in the wilds of Africa, which made Stanley the most famous figure of his day, his editor, James Gordon Bennett, promptly assigned him to covering a small time fire.

As soon as he gets through with a few personal appearances, Dick Merrill will calmly return to driving those big jiggers down to Dade County and back.

CAPITAL PICKS MANY FOR COURT BERTH

Washington, May 18 (AP)—Capital speculation over a Supreme Court successor to retiring Justice Willis Van Devanter included today a host of government officials.

There was no official indication, however, that the President had chosen a nominee.

Under the law, there is no requirement that a lawyer be named to the tribunal and it would be possible for the President to select a leading economist.

There was speculation whether he might name a woman to the bench. Some observers mentioned the name of Judge Florence E. Allen of Cleveland, a member of the sixth circuit court of appeals.

HINT FRANKFURTER

Others prominently discussed in connection with the nomination included:

Robert H. Jackson, 45-year-old assistant attorney-general, one of the attorneys who represented the government in arguments before the Supreme Court on constitutionality of the Social Security Act.

Felix Frankfurter, Harvard Law School professor who has advised the administration on its legislative program.

Donald Richberg, former head of the National Recovery Administration.

James M. Landis, 38, chairman of the Securities Commission and newly designated dean of Harvard Law School. He has aided in drafting a number of New Deal laws.

Attorney General Cummings and Solicitor General Stanley Reed.

PECORA DISCUSSED

Samuel Rosenman, Ferdinand Pecora and Learned Hand of New York courts. Pecora was a former member of the Securities Commission and was attorney for the Senate committee which investigated Wall Street practices. Rosenman was counsel to Mr. Roosevelt when he was Governor of New York.

Government attorneys said there was some question whether a member of Congress would be eligible for appointment to the court because of the recent legislation permitting justices to retire at full pay and still be eligible for service if needed.

Section six of the first article of the Constitution says:

"No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

WAGNER MENTIONED

Some lawyers expressed the view that the retirement act which became law March 1, granting justices over 70 the right to retire at full pay might be construed as an increase in "emoluments" of the office.

Nevertheless, among those mentioned in corridor discussions included Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York Democrat, who has taken a leading part in pushing administration legislation through Congress. He is best known in connection with the Wagner Labor Relations Act which recently was upheld by the tribunal.

Landis was one of the original New Dealers. Serving at the beginning of President Roosevelt's first term as a member of the Federal Trade Commission. He became chairman of the Securities Commission after Joseph P. Kennedy of New York resigned.

SENATE GROUP REJECTS COURT PLAN, 10-8

Washington, May 18 (AP)—The Senate judiciary committee voted 10 to 8 today to report the Roosevelt court bill adversely to the Senate.

First members to emerge from the committee session said all amendments, except a few clarifying changes, were rejected by the dominant opposition majority.

The vote, taken in executive session shortly after announcement of the retirement of Justice Van Devanter, came out just as it had been forecast for more than a week.

BORAH GIVES NEWS

"Ten to eight adversely."

The line-up on the final vote, Borah said, was just as it had been forecast—with seven Democrats and three Republicans opposing the presidential measure to increase the size of the Supreme Court.

Seven Democrats and Senator Norris, the lone Independent, voted for the bill.

Chairman Ashurst (D.-Ariz.), told reporters who jammed into the smoky committee room that the long series of amendments and compromise proposals had been rejected in rapid succession before the President's bill was put to a vote.

HOW THEY VOTED

Those voting to report the President's bill favorably, he said, were Senators Neely, Logan, Dietrich, McGill, Pittman, Hughes, Norris and Ashurst.

Those against were Senators King, McCarran, Van Nuys, Hatch, Burke, Connally, O'Mahoney, Borah, Austin and Steiwer.

On the other hand an opposition leader — Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) — quickly demanded withdrawal of the President's plan.

He said "there is absolutely no excuse whatever for going ahead."

Word of Van Devanter's retirement quickly spread through the Capitol. Excited senators called each other to talk it over and discuss the possible effect on the bitter court bill controversy.

There was little prospect that it would immediately affect the vote in the judiciary committee, where sentiment was thoroughly crystallized. But some senators felt it would have a tremendous long range effect on the measure.

Ten of the 18 members of the committee are publicly committed against the bill, which would permit the addition of as many as six new justices unless those now over 70 retire.

Judge Van Devanter Quits Supreme Court Berth

SENDS LETTER TO PRESIDENT

widespread excitement on Capitol Hill.

HUGHES STRESSES LOSS

Under the reorganization plan the President would have power to add six new justices to the high bench, one for each present member of the court over 70.

Van Devanter has long been considered a conservative member of the court. His retirement brought from Chief Justice Hughes a statement that the court would suffer a "most serious loss."

Simultaneously, high officials said there probably would be no more retirements from the court at this time. But others said that before the beginning of the fall term of the court in October, Justice Sutherland might take advantage of the retirement act.

In a statement, the Chief Justice said:

"His long judicial experience, his extraordinary memory and grasp of precedents, his acumen and fairness enabled him to render a service of inestimable value in our deliberations, while his equable temperament, his tact and unfailing kindliness made him an ideal associate. We shall greatly miss him."

LETTER TO ROOSEVELT

"My Dear Mr. President:

"Having held my commission as an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and served in that court, for 26 years, and having come to be 78 years of age, I desire to avail myself to the rights, privileges and judicial service specified in the act of March 1, 1937, entitled 'an act to provide for retirement of justices of the Supreme Court,' and to that end I hereby retire from regular active service on the bench—this retirement to be effective on and after the second day of June, 1937, that being the day next following the adjournment of the present term of the court.

"I have the honor to remain,

"Very Respectfully Yours,

"(Signed)

"WILLIS VAN DEVANTER.

"The President."

JUSTICE WILLIS VAN DEVANTER

(The act to which the justice referred permits justices over 70 to retire at full pay—$20,000 annually.)

Van Devanter has been a member of the court since 1911.

The retirement created the first vacancy of the court since 91-year-old Oliver Wendell Holmes resigned in 1932 after serving 30 years. He was succeeded by Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

Until the beginning of the present term of court last October, Van Devanter had voted against administration action or laws 12 times and for it once. The sole exception was the Tennessee Valley Authority controversy, and the decision did not involve constitutionality of the act.

This term, however, he voted in line with the administration nine times and against it three times. Two of the three votes were against application of the Wagner Labor Relations Act to the Associated Press and to manufacturing concerns. The other was against the administrations' contention that the congressional resolution abrogating payment of obligations in gold applied to bullion as well as to coin.

JUSTICE NOW 78 YEARS OLD

If a justice whose views were those of Administration lawyers had been on the bench instead of Van Devanter since Mr. Roosevelt was inaugurated in 1933, it would have changed the outcome of only three major cases.

Only 14 justices in the history of the nation have surpassed Van Devanter in length of service on the high court. The record of 34 years was established by Justice Field, who served from 1863 to 1897. The famed Chief Justice John Marshall, who died in 1835, was beaten by a few months.

HEALTH EXCELLENT

Despite his age, Van Devanter appeared to be in excellent health. He delighted in tramping over a farm he recently bought in Maryland. And he went duck hunting as often as he could.

The justice was considered the court's authority on Federal jurisdiction, public lands and water rights. Whenever a case involving those questions was under argument, he took a leading part in questioning the attorneys. His questions were searching and directly to the point of the controversy.

During recent years he wrote fewer opinions than any other justice. He delivered only one opinion during the term ending in June, 1935, and only two the following year. He wrote more during the 1936-37 term.

MUTUAL'S EX-BACKER WILL TESTIFY AT INQUIRY

There were so many unsettled claims against the Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company it was "disgraceful," Attorney Bernard Fink testified at the special legislative inquiry into the company's affairs today.

Furthermore, said the witness, when it came to settling the claims he found that the reserves the company had set up were "ridiculous," in some instances being only $150 or $200 when from $1500 to $2000 was necessary.

Fink said that these were only some of the things he had to contend with after he was retained to reorganize the Commonwealth so that it could continue to operate.

While Fink was being questioned by the special commission, a collect telegram—forty cents charges—was received from Frank Cohen, New York financier who backed the Commonwealth, asking that he be allowed to testify at the hearing.

OFFER ACCEPTED

The telegram was accepted and it was announced that Cohen would be asked to appear at the next session of the hearing—probably on Thursday. Insurance Commissioner DeCelles may also testify on the same day.

Fink has been explaining how he earned the $1000 fee he received from the Commonwealth and what discussions he had with Commissioner DeCelles over the company.

He said that at the beginning the commissioner had a lot of things to find fault with and most of them were ironed out. But DeCelles' attitude on Cohen, said the witness, he couldn't succeed in changing.

Asked if the commissioner had told him point blank he wouldn't allow the Commonwealth to continue if Cohen didn't get out, Fink replied:

"If he didn't state it in so many words, I believe that was his state of mind."

TARR ENTERS QUIZ

Fink quoted DeCelles as having said that he didn't think that Cohen was a good influence in the company and that he didn't see how it could be successful "on the advices of Mr. Cohen."

Fink explained that one of the things he first wanted to do was to clean out the entire board of directors. On this point, Cohen did not entirely agree, however, said the witness, because Cohen wanted Isaac E. Lotkin retained as a director.

Q—Why didn't you want Lotkin? A—Because he had been connected with two or three bankrupt companies. But I was willing that he should stay on as property claims adjuster.

Q—Was Everett P. Annis, the $15-a-week president, on that board? A—I think he was at the time.

SAYS DE CELLES AIDED

Fink went on to say that he suggested a new claims manager by the name of Doyle to replace Frank Hurley, then claims manager.

Fink said that his plan of reorganization included putting men of experience in the claims department and improving the type of risks. He said he had figured that all pending claims at that time could be disposed of with money on hand.

Asked if DeCelles were aware of the reorganization plan, Fink said that not only was he aware of them but that DeCelles had helped him with his chart.

Q—Did you agree on all those things? A—Some things we did not agree on. One was on Cohen being in the company.

DISCUSSED AGENCY

After suspension of the State Underwriters' Company, agency for the Commonwealth, Fink said he had some talk with Commissioner DeCelles about the Kilby Underwriters' Company taking over the agency.

He said he had made up the forms for the Kilby, and John S. Slater, general counsel for the Commonwealth, had drawn up the incorporation papers.

Q (by Tarr)—Did Commissioner DeCelles know who the men in the Kilby company were? A—Yes, I think I told him.

Q—Did he tell you he had revoked the license of another company composed of the same men? A—I knew about it. It may have been mentioned. It may not have been.

Q—Was there any delay on the part of the insurance commissioner in granting the license to the Kilby company? A—I don't remember.

Q—Did you keep any records of your service for the Commonwealth company? A—No, but I can recall the amount of time I put in.

Q (by Representative Barnet)—But you have no recollection of the details? A—No, and you wouldn't have either, had you ben in my place.

Q—I hope I could have. A—I'm a human being—not a typewriter. No lawyer in Boston has a better memory than I have.

Q (By Tarr—How much time did you put in for the Commonwealth Company? A—Fifty days and as many nights.

Q—What discussions did you have during that time? A—I can't tell you. If you have ever been mixed up in a business matter you can't recall the details of conversations. You might talk ten hours about some little point.

Q—Do you mean to say you worked 50 days and 50 nights and you can't tell us what you talked about? A—I wish you were there and you would appreciate it.

Q—Do you keep any diary on services to your clients? A—No, we represent the poor man mostly; we are poor men's lawyers. We are down on Washington street, not State street.

Q—What was the condition of the Commonwealth company between October 30 and November 30? A—Prior to November 30 we conducted a campaign for the settlement of claims. Between January and October 30 only $30,000 was spent on claims. That meant that claims that should have been settled were not and that was disgraceful. As a result of putting part of the reorganization in effect we made a great effort to settle claims, so that in November $150,000 to $175,000 was paid out in claims.

Q—Were there any other changes from the latter part of October to the latter part of November? We all were hoping to get rid of all outstanding claims.

Q—And you pointed that out to Commissioner DeCelles? A—Oh, yes, and we were warned by DeCelles not to blackjack anybody into a settlement by telling him that the company might go out of business.

Fink, in response to numerous additional questions by Representative Tarr, said that Claim Manager Doyle was given a free rein, but that some claims were settled much in excess of the reserves.

"Some were settled for $1500 or $2000 where the reserves set up by the company were only $100 or $150," he testified. "Those reserves were ridiculous."

Q—What did you discuss with Miss O'Leary, examiner of the insurance department? A—The matter of reserves. From the information I had there was a great discrepancy between those set up by Ray Latshaw, general manager of the Commonwealth, and those set up by Miss O'Leary. I asked DeCelles for permission to make comparisons. Those set up by Miss O'Leary were correct in most instances. Latshaw told me frankly that he knew nothing about setting up reserves.

LEAVES BABY FOR FATHER

Lowell, May 18—A pretty Nashua, N. H., nurse and her male companion pleaded guilty in district court here today to charges of abandoning a two-months-old baby girl.

The infant was found in a Moody street doorway, a note pinned to its clothing calling on the alleged father to furnish a home for the child.

Captured less than two hours after the baby was left in the doorway, the pair gave their names as Juliette Levesque, 24, unmarried, and Robert A. Le Blanc, 26, both of Nashua.

Judge Frederic A. Fisher placed the case on file and the two were released.

According to police, Miss Levesque claims she left the baby in the doorway of the father of the child.

Police said Miss Levesque told them she had cared for the baby since its birth in her home but had decided she could not give it the proper rearing and planned to turn it over to the alleged father in Lowell.

She told authorities she dressed the baby up in its best clothing and asked LeBlanc to drive her here. They drove directly to the man's home, she said, and she carried the tot into the hallway, kissed her goodby and left.

FIN. COM. MOVE ALL CONFUSING

It was very mysterious what the Boston Finance Commission was attempting to do today in the Codman Hill Construction Company investigation, and in fact it was so mysterious that newspaper lads finally became very angry.

The reporters had been told the hearing would open in Finance Commission quarters, 24 School street, and that Mayor Mansfield's brother, Edmund R. Mansfield, summoned yesterday as a witness, positively would appear.

More specifically, the reporters had been told the hearing would open at 11 a. m.

Well, it came up to almost 11 o'clock and George R. Farnum, the Finance Commission's special counsel, who came back into the fold only recently, whistled lightly to himself, got up, put on his hat and sauntered out, much as if he were going for a cigar.

However, he never came back with the cigar or with anything or anybody else, including himself or the mayor's brother.

An attache of the commission did pop in ahead and said everyone regretted the mayor's brother wouldn't be present today.

PHONE CO. PAY INCREASED

Employes won and stockholders lost a comparatively small percentage in dividends today when the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company announced adjustments in wages and the June quarterly declaration.

According to the company announcement, "the wages of a large majority of the employes of all departments are above the 1929 levels, despite the shortening of the work week to 40 hours."

Under the new agreement, it was also declared, an extra week's vacation is granted to all employes with 15 or more years' service.

The dividend declaration for the quarter is $1.50 a share, 25 cents less than the first quarter payment, but the same figure for the corresponding period of the past four years.

President John J. Robinson said:

"After payment of a dividend of $1.75 in the first quarter the company had a deficit of $280,000, which it was hoped might be made up in the succeeding quarters when earnings are usually larger.

"Increased expenditures, however, due largely to the wage increases, amounting to $1,500,000 per year, together with the first quarter deficit, caused the directors to return to the $1.50 dividend."

3 Men Held After Still Raid on Farm

Following a raid by agents of the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit on a chicken farm in South Acton and the seizure of a still valued at $10,000, three men were held in a total of $7500 bail by Commissioner Harry N. Guterman in federal court today.

The men, each of whom waived reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty, are Alessandro Peppe and Philip DiPirro, both of Somerville. They were held in $3000 each. Anthony Schiaffe of Falcon street, East Boston, was held in $100 for a hearing May 26.

Plane Victim Dies

Franklin, N. C., May 18 (AP)—Robert Williams, 17, of Jacksonville, Fla., died early today of injuries suffered in a plane crash yesterday that killed Harve Shiddles, Franklin taxi operator.

DRIVER INJURED IN TANK BLAST

Taunton, May 18—The combination of gasoline fumes and an acetelyne torch sent Clarence Shields, 39, of Lawton street, to Morton Hospital in a serious condition today after the tank of his car exploded while he was repairing a fender.

Shields had parked his car at the curb and had crawled underneath to work. When the torch touched the fender the explosion occurred and Shields was enveloped in flames.

Passing motorists dragged him out, wrapped him in blankets and rushed him to the hospital. His name was placed on the danger list.

Ends His Life in Fifth Try

Worcester, May 18—Four times thwarted in his efforts to kill himself, according to police, Edward H. Taylor, 28, of Burncoat street, succeeded today by dashing out to the garage, piling up junk against the door, and switching on the motor of his car.

Before his landlady, Mrs. Helen Squires, and neighbors could break down the door, Taylor died of monoxide poisoning.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Squires prevented Taylor from slashing his throat, she told police. Recently she again frustrated his efforts to lock himself in the garage.

Amy Washburn Plans Wedding On Cape Late in June

By BETTY ALDEN

REPRESENTATIVES from nearly every section of the country except the far, far West, will gather in the little town of Truro on Cape Cod, for the wedding of Amy Washburn to Stewart Hamilton, Jr., which will take place Wednesday afternoon, June 30, at 2:30 o'clock . . .

MRS. GEORGE MUIR 2d

The future bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Augustus Washburn of Bay State road and Dangerfield, Truro . . . She will be given in marriage by her father, in the First Congregational Church in Truro, and the ceremony will be performed by Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill . . .

Catherine Stack Skelly is coming on from Louisville, Ky., to attend the bride as maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be the Misses Jane Hamilton of Detroit, sister of the bridegroom, and Jane Wilson of Jackson Heights, Long Island . . .

The best man and ushers are coming from equally distant places . . . for John Johnson will make the journey from Louisville to stand up with the bridegroom, while Charles Cummiskey is coming from Detroit and Carter Wells from Chicago, to attend to the duties of ushering . . .

There will be a small wedding reception at Dangerfield for relatives and a few out of town guests . . .

Mr. Hamilton is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Stewart Hamilton of Detroit . . . He graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and Williams College, class of 1934, and is now a student at the Wayne University School of Medicine in Detroit . . . He is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity . . .

The bride-to-be graduated from Emma Willard School in Troy, N. Y., in 1932, and for the past two years has been a volunteer secretarial worker in the Occupational Therapy Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital . . .

Through her mother, who is the former Amy Silsbee Appleton, she is a granddaughter of General Francis Henry Appleton and a niece of Francis Henry Appleton, Jr., of Brookline . . . she is also a niece of Henry S. Appleton of Marlboro street and of Mrs. Tarrant P. King of Adams street, Milton . . . Miss Nathalie Appleton, Mrs. King Brigham, William T. King and Putnam King are all cousins of the bride-to-be . . .

Her father, Dr. Washburn, was for many years director of the Massachusetts General Hospital . . . In 1919, he was decorated by the Duke of Windsor, then Prince of Wales, with the Order of St. Michael and St. George, for distinguished service as chief surgeon at Base Hospital No. 5 during the World War . . .

Dedham Polo Club Plans Horse Show

THINGS WERE NOT so dead in Dedham over the week-end . . . All day Sunday the Dedham Polo and Country Club was a beehive of industry . . . and if anyone wanted to get in touch with any of the party-goers of the Dedham countryside on Saturday afternoon it's a safe bet they found them at Greystone Farm in nearby Dover, where the Davis brothers, Messrs. George and Arthur, gave a cocktail party to enliven the program of America's most universal playtime, Saturday afternoon . . .

Sunday afternoon, the committee members, nearly two hundred strong, who are assuming the responsibilities of the annual Memorial Day Horse Show at the Dedham Polo and Country Club, had another of their business-like meetings to consider a few last-minute details for the two-day show . . . A few new names have been added to the various committees . . . such as Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Almy, Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Cabot, Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, Mr. and Mrs. John Wells Farley and Mr. Talbot M. Baker, who is a new member of the executive committee . . .

One of the innovations at the show, which has some of the more timid riders shivering in their timbers, is the inclusion of standard Olympic jumps over an Olympic course in one of the open jumping classes . . . this is the first time these jumps have been used on Dedham's outside course . . .

After the horse show meeting a lot of socialites stayed on at the club to spend the evening considering the pros and cons of the Oxford Group . . . at a meeting to which all the fashionables of the countryside were invited . . . Hugh Scott presided and Mrs. Scott was among those who spoke briefly to help satisfy the curiosity of those who are not yet up on the full meaning of the movement . . .

Young George Muir, 3d, who first saw the light of day last Friday at Richardson House, almost caused a major family row over who should be the first (aside from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Muir, 2d, of Cohasset) to see him . . . His Uncle Gordon Muir had the honor, however, when he accompanied the proud papa, who had been handing out cigars all day, over to the hospital to make his evening call . . . The baby reigns supreme as the only grandchild on the paternal side of his family, though he shares the spotlight with a number of grandsons on his mother's side . . . His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William J. Davidson of Cohasset.

Women's City Club Plans Flower Show Tomorrow

Quite in keeping with the coronation and the British influence of the past weeks, the committee for the annual flower show at the Women's City Club have used an English motif in the decorations of the clubhouse and garden for the show which will be held tomorrow.

An old English market place will be reconstructed in the garden, with lambs, rabbits and a variety of barnyard fowls to add a picturesque touch to the scene. Fresh strawberries with rich Devonshire cream will be among the many farm and garden products sold by costumed vendors.

Mrs. Samuel J. Newman is chairman of the committee, and assisting her are Betty Titcomb, Mrs. Robert Steinert, Mrs. William Underwood and Mrs. Horace Poleman.

Entered in the competition for the most artistic stall arrangement are Mrs. Guy Currier, Mrs. Arthur K. Blood, Mary E. Batchelder, Mrs. C. Guy Lane, Florence S. Dustin, Mrs. E. Winslow Ware, Mrs. Oliver Andrews, Louise Graves and Mrs. Lorenze Muther, president of the club.

This year, for the first time in the club's history, the house and garden will be open to the public on May 20, the day after the flower show.

Mary Barry to Become Bride in Belmont

WITH JUNE'S arrival occurring in the next fortnight, the brides-elect and sweet girl graduates of next month furnish the day's most interesting chit-chat.

One of the loveliest brides of next month will be the exceptionally attractive Mary Barry of Belmont, active alumna of Boston Notre Dame and Emmanuel Colleges, who becomes Mrs. Vincent O'Conness at a quiet ceremony on the evening of June 24 at the rectory of Our Lady of Mercy Church in Belmont.

Rev. Charles Maguire will perform the ceremony, to be followed by a small reception to the immediate family and friends at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Berry of Belmont.

Eleanor Connor of Brookline, who will be the bride's only at attendant, was hostess at a gay prenuptial affair at her home. Among the guests feting the bride-elect were many of her former classmates at Emmanuel, Mary and Grace Ayers, Olive Lynch, Louise Tivnan, Mary Sheridan, Mrs. John Shields, Margaret O'Connell, Mrs. John Parry and Helene Stout, president of the Proparvulis Club.

After the quiet reception, on the 24th the bridal pair will depart for Europe, where they will visit Italy, Switzerland and Ireland.

Mary, who is a tall, slim blonde, has been actively identified with alumnae affairs of the Boston Academy of Notre Dame and Emmanuel College. Mr. O'Connell, the son of Mrs. M. Joseph O'Connell of Cambridge, was graduated from Boston College High school, Boston College and the Beacon School of Podiatry.

Mary McCarron To Wed on June 12

Another popular Notre Dame grad is planning to join June bridal ranks. Mary McCarron, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. McCarron, has chosen the second Saturday in June as the date of her wedding to Walter D. Considine of New Bedford.

Miss McCarron, who has taken active part in the presentation of "Pilate's Daughter" at the Mission Church Hall for many years, was honored at a buffet supper at which the maid of honor, Mildred Barry of Jamaica Plain, was hostess.

Among the guests honoring the future Mrs. Considine were Ellen Teehan, Helen Wall, Kathleen Costello, Mary Welch, Mary Murphy and Madeline Kelly.

June 12 has been selected as the date of the wedding which takes place at the Mission Church at 11 o'clockk. A reception and breakfast to the bridal pair will be staged at the Hotel Somerset.

Miss McCarron, who is a graduate of the Roxbury Academy of Notre Dame, has been most active in alumnae affairs.

Regis Announces Honor Awards

On the topic of sweet girl graduates, Regis College has just announced its honor awards.

Mary Rose Keefe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Keefe of Waltham, leads the seniors who will receive cum laude degrees at commencement week, the first days of June. Miss Keefe, vice-president of the sodality, will deliver the tree oration at the class day exercises on June 2.

Victoria Lavalee of Marlborough street is the second honor student. She has displayed her versatility by serving as president of the Student Co-Operative Government, assistant business manager of the "Mount Regis," annual senior album and secretary of the Spanish Club.

Assistant art editor of the senior book, Alice McConville of Newton Centre, was chosen as the third ranking student of the class. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. McConville and will have a prominent part in the commencement play, Shakespeare's "The Winter Tale," to be presented as a feature of commencement week.

Also represented in the group of honor students is Ruth Heywood, vice-president of the Sodality and Mathematics Club, who joins honor ranks next month. Miss Heywood hails from Fall River and is the treasurer of the Classical Club.

Other seniors who will be granted honor degree at Commencement exercises are Marguerite Leary of West Roxbury, who served as class president in sophomore year, Helen M. Shaughnessy of Uxbridge, editor of the college's daily newspaper, the Regis Herald, and a member of the student government.

Marie Shaloo of Fall River, who recently chairmaned the Regis College benefit at the Hotel Somerset, is another high-ranking student being graduated this year. She will serve as class prophet at this year's exercises and has also been awarded a leading role in the Commencement play.

Other seniors who will be applauded soundly at Commencement exercises are Elizabeth Donovan of Brookline, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. James T. Donovan; Mary M. O'Connell, literary editor of the Regis Herald and Margaret M. O'Connell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. O'Connell, and poet of this year's class.

BOSTON after DARK

(A columnist's Stooge sends in a complaint about the Holland's office, which has been opened for the first time since Geo. spun from a curbstone at Dinty Moore's and landed under blankets at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.)

GEORGE HOLLAND

Dear Dusty (That's Holland):

If you blew all this dust out of here, who would you find? . . . I mean about ghosts of the swell lads who've tramped over this sill and gone again? . . . And now only the Stooge is here, waiting for you to kick out of there and come back . . . You know, like waiting for bail? . . . And incidentally, this is the first time any newspaperman in the world was ever known to have three hats . . . As they hang there on the hat-tree you wonder if the Ritz Bros. mightn't come up—making faces—if the hats were lifted . . .

Rest for the Weary:

Was it Fred Allen that told us about the lad who's taking his vacation early this year? . . . So's it won't interfere with his summer? . . . It couldn't have been Drohan, because he didn't stay awake long enough . . . I think it was Drohan, though, that told about the avalanche of old wallpaper greenbacks in Southie not so long ago . . . The shower had all the cops and the storekeepers worried . . . And then they found one of the old-timers had passed on and the kitty had moved down to the folks . . . The taverns got quite a collection . . .

Once Over Lightly:

Got your note about Fire Commissioner McLaughlin and why doesn't he appoint those new firemen . . . Isn't he supposed to have the same leeway in appointments that Commissioner Timilty has with the bluecoats in the other uniforms? . . . I mean, the go-ahead has been given but nothing further has been done . . . While the lads who hope for the jobs are doing only that . . .

How can you typewrite day in and day out in an armchair? . . . And why don't you get a new mill? . . . This one falls out into your lap about every 300 words . . . Even your telephone book is dusty . . . Probably needs some new numbers, like all of us, but I wouldn't crack that to either wife . . . I guess that June 1 note about the federal bldg. shifts was a little too hot . . . I understand the lad is moving heaven and earth to stay in the former . . . There may be more later, however . . .

I just coughed and lost almost three columns of notes . . . When the dust settles in a day or so, some of the items may pop out again . . . Don't think any outfit except the Flanagan Checker Club would have the nerve to do it—and the brawn to back up any trouble . . . They've invited every mayoralty candidate to the annual dance on the 24th . . . There should be some fun because almost every candidate claims to have Southie in the bag . . .

That nice kid violinist, Albie Goldberg, the 7-yr.-old in Roxbury they call Rubinoff, Junior, will have his own recital Sept. in Whitney Hall, Brookline . . . Charlie O'Malley writes to tell how much he and the whole O'Malley bunch of globe-trotters are enjoying Duke Lake's Ireland series . . . Just back from a world girdle, the O'Malley clan feel like starting once more . . . They cabled you three times from far corners . . . I'm saving the letter for Austen . . .

That new pocket mag—for men and men only—has other readers . . . The anonymous article is the puller-in . . . Other authors include Bert Acosta, Leonard Hall and Heywood Broun . . . Jack Granara, the RKO-Bostonian, had the copy I saw . . . Wedding bells June 27th for George (Happy) Bamberg, the Hub theater vet, and Mary Ahearn of W. Rox. . . . He was a program lad 22 yrs. ago in the Tremont Theater, with Al Sheehan . . . He's still with Al, except that it's the Colonial now as advertising agt . . . The bridal couple will have a St. Theresa's ceremony in Roxbury . . .

Intown bandboys expect that "My Cabin of Dreams," made up by two of them (Al Frazzini and Nat Madison) will be a big hit . . . Jayne Whitney, Virginia lass who has captivated Boston with her voice (at the Mayfair) has been asked to come back . . . And another beauty, Betty Stone of Newton, is home for a time after making good as one of N. Y.'s Powers' photo model agency's most sought-after . . . Powers' agency is the biggest in the world, by the way . . .

That other model, Geo., who was noticed in the big ciggie ad a week ago and identified as Virginia Walker, has a movie bid . . . She's the Back Bay girl . . . Loew's and RCA earnings both up heavily for this year's first quarter . . . They haven't decided yet whether radio dramatization of movies hurts or helps . . .

You haven't done much sailing this yr. so far but new commodores coming up are Geo. French, the Keith Memorial mgr., Artist Cyl Champlin and Henry De Moiselle . . . They're calling themselves the French Commodores, no less . . . When Variety's Max Fox joins them the French tag must come off and it'll be plain "Four Commodores" . . . Sally Rand and her entire show dickering with big nite spot impresario here for appearance in June . . . It'll be hot enough then for them fans.

I. J. Fox's Ed Tarler writes from Westward Ho, Phoenix (that's in Arizona—or did you have geography in S. B. H. S.?) that he struck 95 while passing through on the way to Hollywood . . . But he didn't say whether it was miles, temperature or persons . . . This dust is terrible yet . . . Have to let it go 'till tomorrow . . .

Sea Classic Thrills at Colonial

By PEGGY DOYLE

"Captains Courageous," Rudyard Kipling's deathless story of a spoiled brat of a boy and a gallant Portuguese fisherman transferred to the screen by Metro, is as nearly perfect an example of picture-making as has ever been unreeled.

At its New England premiere at the Colonial last night, it was generally agreed that such lofty adjectives as magnificient, superb, masterful and great have been too loosely used in describing lesser offerings, leaving us wordlessly inadequate in describing M-G-M's latest and finest film achievement.

Kipling died without ever being converted to the screen as a medium for his talents, and yet his epic of men and ships discovers him to the movie-going world as a master of screen technique. For "Captains Courageous" will as certainly become a film classic as it has been a literary classic.

In a season of outstanding productions, it stands out like a white light in a gray sky. It is the most articulate, tender and salty story of the season that has ever been preserved in celluoid, is this thrilling picture of the life on the Grand Banks fishermen off fogbound Newfoundland.

Freddie Bartholomew, as the mean, little, rich boy, Harvey Cheyne, who is regenerated under the influence of Manuel, rough but tender fisherman, and the other courageous seafarers, is as heart-rocking a portrayal as this talented young Britisher has ever given. His young bewilderment and misery following Manuel's sudden death has the aching poignancy of actual heartbreak. There is no doubt after this that Master Bartholomew is the screen's finest child-star.

Spencer Tracy's Manuel, Portuguese doryman who, when the millionaire's son tumbled off the great liner, "fished the little fish out of the sea," is a consummate portrayal. Not too convincing in the beginning, once he has hauled the drowning lad into his dory and taken "my little fish" under his wing, his Manuel wins you as surely as it does the hero-worshipping youngster.

A boisterous, barrel-chested, swaggering fellow, Manuel, playing his quaint-looking mandolin-hurdygurdy, singing his songs "out of my insides" and talking to his reluctantly admiring protege, reveals a nobility and courage that are utterly convincing. Tracy's illiterate, inarticulate, heroic braggart of a fisherman is great acting.

Lionel Barrymore, philosophic old skipper of the We're Here, (the fishing schooner which returns young Cheyne to his father in three months a changed boy) turns in a splendid performance, as does Melvyn Douglas, as the boy's father.

John Carradine, as Long Jack; Mickey Rooney as Captain Disko's son; Charles Grapewin as Uncle Salters and the rest of the Grand Banks crew of deep sea fishermen turn in flawless performances.

Victor Fleming's direction is inspired and the script Marc Connelly, John Lee Mahin and Dale Van Every colloborated on redounds to the glory of the master, Kipling.

"Captains Courageous," you'll probably not realize until it's over, has no women in its cast but they are no more missed than are the men that are absent from the 40-women cast of the New York hit, "The Women." This screen saga of the sea is so enthralling, so reeking with the romance of the sea, that it will hold you under its thrall long after you've quit the Colonial lobby.

At the Gayety

All-Star Cast for Mae West Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright 1937, By Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 18—"Frivolous Sal" sounds just like a Mae West title, doesn't it? But Emanuel Cohen expects to find an even better one to take the place of this tentative title of her next picture—and it's a musical of the gay nineties, if you please.

Louella O. Parsons

Very wisely Manny Cohen has decided to surround the West with an all-star cast. In the past Mae has had only a well known leading man while the remainder of the player lineup has been chosen from bit actors.

Eddie Sutherland who today signed to direct her, we hear, is considering Jimmy Durante for a big part and he would like to borrow May Robson from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but so far these two names have only been mentioned. The Al Jolson deal is still hanging fire and I understand Al was to have a conference with Cohen today to determine if the role is right for him.

• • •

Kenny Baker, who is expected to take his place with Bing Crosby and Dick Powell as soon as "Mr. Dodds Takes the Air" is released, has been borrowed by Walter Wanger for the lead in "52nd Street." Walter, who has been searching for an actor who could sing and play the part of the chief male entertainer, took a look at Mervyn Le Roy's picture and immediately borrowed Baker.

• • •

Chatter in Hollywood: You needn't be surprised if one of these days Leatrice Joy, the Second, makes her debut as a Cecil B. De Mille star. Leatrice, the First, stopped over on the Paramount lot to have luncheon with her old boss and glorifier, C. B., and took with her her attractive young daughter, whose father you will remember was Jack Gilbert.

• • •

A line or two: Josef Von Sternberg back in town after many months in Europe spending his first evening here with Marlene Dietrich who continues his very good friend. Rumor is that Von Sternberg may direct Marlene in her next movie.

Frances Langford had to be supported at the microphone to sing her songs at the Hollywood Hotel broadcast last week and now it is merely a matter of how quickly she recuperates as to whether or not she goes into the next James Cagney picture at Grand National . . . Proving they are still on friendly terms in spite of their separation, Joan Bennett picked out all the furniture for Gene Markey's new bachelor quarters, and now Gene's waiting for her to get over the chicken pox to get the rest of it furnished.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Playwright NORMAN KRASNA and ANN GRAHAM, N. Y. actress, are naming the day; it's WENDY BARRIE whom PETER ARNO is squiring especially to the Brown Derby, these evenings; HARRY LAUDER, admittedly sightseeing and without any movie intentions, greeted old friends at a cocktail party at the Victor Hugo; WILLIAM POWELL vacationing in MYRON SELZNICK'S mountain lodge; ERROL FLYNN and DAVID NIVEN charming hosts at their housewarming-cocktail party for which all Hollywood turned out.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"My mother gave me this," Marie touched the diamond clip at her neck, and as her new mother-in-law looked polite, but unimpressed, she added:

"It's all real stones, and platinum. Mother had it made into a clip a couple of years ago.

"Her mother—she was an actress, you know, had the stones," put in Eddie.

"Well!" Mrs. Wilson said again. She offered more biscuits, which Marie refused, but Eddie ate.

It was too bad that Eddie had done this thing. He must have been crazy, but it was plain that he might have done worse. She thought of Mr. Woster's Fred, who went to the Russian River for two weeks and came back married to a divorcee with three little children—and Fred barely 21!

"We haven't a guest room," she told Marie shyly. "We used to. The front room that Bee's got now, used to be. We used to have quite a lot of guests, mostly my folks from Davenport, Iowa, but we never got around to visiting them back, and finally they stopped coming.

"It was an expensive trip for all but my brother-in-law and my sister—he works for the railroad, and now they've settled out here in East Oakland . . . what was I saying? Oh, yes, about the guest room.

"So, anyway, the children were growing up and the rain used to beat in on that old sleeping porch so bad—it's on the west side—that it wasn't much good. I was always having to dry out the bedding, so we had it glassed in and I gave it to Eddie and put Bee in the front room that used to be the guest room, and so—"

She stopped in confusion. She was going to say:

"I suppose you'll have to be in the sleeping porch with Eddie—" but she couldn't quite bring herself to face it. Eddie and that girl . . . She didn't see how she could stand it.

Blushing furiously, she got up and started for the stairway. Over her shoulder she called:

"You can come up if you want to."

Eddie picked up the bags.

"I suppose my trunk will come later," Marie said. Again she was close to tears. She walked so close to Eddie that the big brown suitcase bumped her at every step.

Edward set the suitcases down on the painted floor of his room—the room that used to be a sleeping porch.

Marie closed the door behind them and then stood, clasping and unclasping her cold hands, watching him anxiously.

"Take off your hat and stay a while!"

She took it off, held it.

"Honey—for heaven's sake! Cheer up! My mother isn't so terrifying as all that, is she? I thought she warmed up pretty well. You've got to remember this is a real shock to her. Why, honey girl, you aren't going to cry?"

He took her, hat and all, into his arms, and she held tight to him, laughing breathlessly, hugging closer and closer, wishing he'd never let her go.

He'd known a lot of girls, most of them pretty, but never one so exquisite, so warmly, fragrantly lovely. He was proud of her as an art collector of a new painting.

He wondered if his mother had noticed the beauty of her wide greenish eyes, with their black fringed lashes, their long, sweeping brows.

He wondered if she really appreciated the uniqueness, the complete desirability of the girl he'd chosen. He felt the need to tell her—to get it all clear.

"Listen, darling!" He released himself from her clinging hands. "I better go down and talk to Mom some more. You can be unpacking if you like.

"You'll find room in that chest. My stuff is all over, but you can put it all together in a couple of drawers. I'll be right back."

After he was gone she walked around noting the neat, empty shabbiness of the room, the absence of pictures, of personal belongings, of anything to show that it was Edward's.

How could he have lived in a place like this? How could this house be his, this little, round-faced discontented woman be his mother?

It was all so different—so terribly different than she expected.

She sat down on the one chair that the room contained, and looked around.

They'd always called her room at home small, but this—this was just a cubby hole!

Her room.

She closed her eyes, to shut out the sight. Queer thoughts went running through her head. Wild thoughts. The fifty dollars in her purse. Trains back home. Dover street and her mother and Charlie.

"Oh, no, nothing wrong! I just decided that I'd better stay at home until—"

Until? Until what? Until Edward could take her away somewhere? But Oakland was his home. The people he knew were here, his best chances. A wife's place is with her husband.

Besides, they wouldn't have to be here, in this house, more than a day or so. And it wasn't such a terrible place. The street was rather pretty, and it didn't look so bad from the outside—just sort of cracker-boxy, and narrow and high—and short of paint.

Inside it was comfortable and pleasant enough, except for this room, and of course people always put all the odds and ends and junk in a boy's room.

She got up and walked softly around the little room again. The windows looked out on the back garden. There was an acacia tree just outside, and a pink, flowering plum. And another flowering plum in the yard next door.

But those green net curtains! Why does anyone put green net curtains in a blue room, with a pink bedspread? How does anyone stand it? How did Edward stand it?

She thought of Edward with his neat gray flannel suit and his immaculate shirts and smart ties. Edward, who knew how to order dinners, and talk to waiters and porters, Edward, who looked and acted like a young man-about-town.

She twisted the narrow white-gold wedding ring on her finger. She couldn't be really unhappy when she thought of Edward, Edward, who'd come like a knight in a fairy tale to make all her dreams come true!

And if the way was a bit hard, just at first, and Edward's background wasn't just what she expected, what of it? You can't have everything, and she certainly would not exchange him for the world!

He'd been gone quite a while, and she hadn't done a bit of unpacking! He'd wonder what she'd been doing.

But first she'd clean up a little. Maybe it would please Mrs. Wilson if she changed into her yellow silk sport dress, and looked as if she were really going to stay awhile.

Refreshed, and almost happy again, she slipped into the becoming yellow dress, patted her curls in place, and started unpacking.

Laying out Edward's things gave her a superior, matronly feeling. She hummed softly as she worked.

The half-dozen blouses and dresses she had brought looked new and expensive in their strange, shabby surroundings.

She wondered how much Edward's family knew about her—how much they knew of their "pen pal" correspondence. Probably not much, because Edward had been working as a ranger in Stanislaus national forest when she first wrote, and he'd been up in the country somewhere, near Garberville, all last summer.

But if he said anything at all, he would have mentioned Julie and pictures, and Gram, who was Fanny Standifer and played Shakespeare.

Of course, all that would mean a lot to the Wilsons, because Edward himself had had some stage and screen experience, and he said his sister Beatrice had stage aspirations, too.

Well, she'd be nice to them, and she'd bear in mind that she'd only married Edward, not his family.

Sophisticates Take to Naive Peasant Linens

IT'S A PLEASANT contradiction these days to find that ruffles and naive fashions are taken by the sophisticate as her prerogative, and she gives them a new air you'll all admit! The ultra-feminine girl, on the other hand, leaves these things strictly alone for she knows how easily they can make her seem simpering and coy. It's simple enough to explain—this domination of the smooth-haired type, the gal with the faintest suspicion of angularity. Undoubtedly it's the Simpsonian influence. With all her fetish for the neat silhouette, you've probably noticed La Simpson loves a bit of froth here and there, and peasant fashions are her joy. Now then, if you're the type you'll own this peasant linen printed with red and yellow flowers, navy banding and square neckline and hem. You'll own it even if you're not the least bit Wally-ish, because this is one thing that's quite generally wearable. Miss Betty Stone shows it with a navy coronet and navy sandals. It's grand with a shady hat. Around ten dollars; for shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Correct Poor Speech

GRACIOUS, Ada! Stop that chatter for a minute. See what effect your tortured pronounciation has.

Bob's wishing with all his heart he'd never brought you to this party.

He's embarrassed because you say "JenuWINE EYEtalian spaghetti is preFERable to AMURkan." He wouldn't feel like sinking through the floor if you said JEN-you-in, IhTALyan, PREFerable and AMERican.

Jim is laughing—not with you as you think—but at you. He can afford to be amused by your uncultured pronounciation. He knows you'll never be invited here again so long as you misplace your accents and say "I went DIErect to the ADdress." DihRECT and adDRESS are right.

Sometimes you slur over whole sylables. You say VIElets for VI-o-lets, MINacher for MIN-a-a-ture, CHAWKlut for CHOC-o-late, KARmul for CAR-a-mel.

You never know when even a misplaced accent may close some business or social opportunity to you. So learn to accent these words properly: ADmirable, aDULTS, conTRACtor, DEFicit, DIRigible, fiNANCE, freQUENTed, HARass.

Do you sound as if you're gargling when you try to say commonly used French words like menu, regime, hors d'oeuvres? Say MEN-you or MAIN-you, rayZHEEM and or DERvr.

It's easy to clean up speech errors. A little practice each day with the help of our 40-page booklet, Words Most Often Mispronounced, will make your pronunciation pleasing and correct. Easy-to-study lists show the right way to say the words you've blundered over.

Send 15c for our booklet, Words Most Often Mispronounced, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Security Number Filing Is Urged

Washington, May 18 (US)—Have you applied for your account number under the federal old age benefit system? The Social Security Board today asked workers in commerce and industry, who have not, to do so promptly.

Although 27,500,000 applications have been received, tens of thousands of workers, mostly in the South, have neglected to file, the board said.

"Headline" Fashions

HEADLINE news makes headline fashions. From time immemorial we've been looking to our daily newspapers to supply us with inspiration for our newest fashions.

Every night we pore over the news of the day, absorbing every detail of Act Two of the royal romance, or Chapter Seven of the gruesome war story.

And all the time we may be sure that sooner or later we'll be staring in wide-eyed fascination at the exact replica of the evening gown worn by the very same princess royal on a state occasion.

Only a year ago with the peace of Europe threatened, Anthony Eden was the newspaper "man of the hour." And sure as fate he served as the sole inspiration for the Homburg, that mannish felt hat which the ultra-chic wore with tailored suits in last year's Easter parade.

Simultaneously the phenomenal success of "Lust of Life" brought its hero, Van Gogh, the painter, into the headlines. Overnight his sunflowers bloomed on scarves, dresses, blouses, etc. Later the Paris Gros Exhibition of Napoleonic paintings scattered postilion coats, Directoire evening gowns, embroidery, beading, etc.

New All-Glass Coffee Maker

The Grounds Form Filter Bed

By MARTHA LEE

WE must tell you about our new all glass Brew and Filter Coffee Maker. It does make delicious coffee and we'll try to explain the principal.

This coffee maker is easily cleaned being all glass. It has no filter cloth or paper—the coffee grounds themselves form the filter bed.

And the coffee is really hot, which is probably due to the fact that the coffee brew comes through one hole instead of being divided into droplets, as in most drip pots.

Here is good news for many of you who live alone, this Coffee Maker will brew one cup of tea or coffee as well as it does full capacity.

Oh, yes it brews tea just as easily as it does coffee. The filter top lifts off and a glass cover fits on leaving a pouring spout. And best of all, that cover doesn't fall off—the common fault of some tea pots.

The iced coffee season is upon us and we believe this coffee maker is just the thing to enhance the service at the table or for the porch or garden luncheon.

COFFEE GELATIN DESSERT

- 1 tablespoon plain gelatin
- ¼ cup cold coffee or water
- 2 cups strong hot coffee
- Few grains salt
- ½ cup sugar

Soften gelatin in cold liquid. Dissolve sugar and salt in hot coffee, add softened gelatin, and stir until melted. Chill until firm. Serve with sweetened and flavored cream or soft custard. Whipped cream of stiffly-beaten egg white may be folded into the gelatin when it is partially set.

COFFEE BAVARIAN CREAM

Soak 2 tablespoons gelatin in 1 cup milk. Bring to the boiling point; 1 cup coffee. Dissolve the gelatin in it. Add 1 cup sugar. Chill these ingredients until they are about to set. Whip them until they are light. Whip until stiff: 2 egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt. Fold them lightly into the gelatin mixture. Whip until stiff: 2 cups heavy cream. Fold it lightly into the gelatin mixture. Chill the pudding until it is set. Serve it cold. Serves 8.

COFFEE ICE BOX CAKE

- ½ cup butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 5 egg yolks
- ¼ cup strong coffee
- Lady Fingers
- 1 cup cream, whipped

Cream butter and sugar, beat in the egg yolks and then the coffee. Line the sides and bottom of the dish with the Lady Fingers and pour in the coffee mixture. Cover the top with Lady Fingers. Chill for 12 hours or more and serve garnished with whipped cream.

Use about 18 1½-inch Lady Fingers.

WIDOW'S SIGNATURE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Please tell me the proper way to express my pleasure to a hostess after having attended her luncheon or dinner party. Should I call at her home, or call her on the telephone?

2—How should a lady sign her name after her husband's death, Mary Smith or Mrs. John Smith?

B.

1—You may, properly, call on your hostess, to say your thank-you. Or you may telephone to her, expressing your appreciation of her hospitality. Or, most graciously, too, you may write her, a day or so after the party, a note of appreciation. Something like this:

DEAR MARY,

It was a perfect party, and you and George are perfect hosts! I had such a happy time, and my heart is full of thanks to you two friends. It was such a joy to meet your charming friends, and to share your hospitality.

Dearest love to you both, and I do hope that I am to see you again very soon.

Devotedly.

2. The forms of name—formal and informal—that a woman used when her husband was living, are the forms that she should use when she is a widow. Her formal name is Mrs. John Smith, and this is the name that would still be on her visiting-card, on the listing in the telephone-book, on all envelopes that are addressed to her.

Her informal name is Mary Brown Smith, and this is, in general, the name she uses in the indirect signature to letters that are not to close friends.

Letters to people whom she does not know very well, but who do know her formal name, are signed:

VERY SINCERELY YOURS,
MARY BROWN SMITH

Business letters, professional letters, letters to people who need to be informed of her formal name, are signed:

VERY TRULY YOURS,
MARY BROWN SMITH
(MRS. JOHN SMITH)

CHAPTER 305

KATHERINE was a false prophet. Junior was not an "efficient alarm clock."

Thinking of Dicky's cryptic comment, "I wonder," when Katherine had predicted that Junior would waken us early, I spoke to him more abruptly than I am wont to do when he is sleeping.

"Dicky, Dickey! wake up!" I adjured him, and he sat up with a jerk.

"What's the matter?" he asked with alarm in his voice, and I felt a qualm of regret for my impetuosity, knowing that I soon would have cause for the qualm.

DICKY EXASPERATED

"It's eight o'clock," I explained lamely, "and I wonder if anything is the matter with the boys. They're not anywhere around."

"Well!" Dicky drawled, permitting himself to be mollified, and stretching himself lazily. "You can't expect Roderick to be displaying any wild enthusiasm for a trip he isn't going to share."

"No," I assented, and then, without my asking him, he explained what he had meant by saying, "I wonder."

"And I think you'll find our young son won't be shouting any hosannas over this particular trip, either," he said.

CHANGE PLANS NOW?

"Why! What do you mean?" I asked blankly.

"Figure it out for yourself!" Dicky retorted. "But don't take my word for it. Just watch Junior's reactions this morning."

"Then perhaps we'd better not go," I said, but I am afraid there was something Machiavellian in my suggestion. I know so well how Dicky reacts to any plan made for him.

"Now, there's a nice hot one, fresh from the griddle," he said truculently. "Get me to change my plans, and stay over a day, especially for this trip, and then pass the thing up for you and Katrina and me because I say Junior isn't exactly throwing handsprings over the prospect. But it's up to you. Do whatever you please. It 'makes no never minds mit me'."

"Of course, we're going," I said decidedly, getting out of bed and into my negligee and slippers. "I'll go out and see what Katherine is doing. The boys may be out there with her, forbidden to waken us."

HASN'T SEEN THEM

Katherine, herself, was preparing breakfast in the kitchen, a proceeding which I protested even as I put my query concerning the boys.

"No, I haven't seen either of the boys," she said. "And will you kindly take those comments upon my working out under the trees and inter them decently? They're not needed here at all."

"But," I insisted. "It isn't fair—"

"But me no buts," she quoted. "I have breakfast almost ready, but there's nobody to eat it except myself. You'll do me a much greater favor by routing out the Dicky-bird, Williams and the two boys, than by any culinary efforts. Mary is getting Noel's breakfast and hers over in their cottage. But please get busy on our crowd."

"Consider them assembled," I said. Dashing back into my room, I rushed into my simple camp attire, and, adjuring Dicky to hurry, went over to the smaller cabin occupied by Williams and the boys.

Williams met me at the door, his face wearing a puzzled expression.

"Do your boys always sleep as late as this?" he asked.

Fashion Flashes

KEEP your furs handy, don't put away your mannish tailored suits, and make up your mind to pick out dark-colored linens and brightly printed silks. These are the items that Paris designers are choosing to make it a gay summer.

Worth shows a blazer of hair seal for town or spectator wear. Mink for sports seems extravagant, but it's irresistible in a back-belted, high-shouldered, notch-lapelled coat.

* * *

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Were the Good Old Days Less Troublesome for Married Women?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A lady who confesses being a little jealous seems to think that the question of personal liberty in marriage has come in the wake of modern improvements.

No domestic topic is more controversial than this one of personal liberty.

Both husbands and wives write in and complain that they have not even a servant girl's privilege of a Sunday off or one night a week out.

Some married people are never happy unless they can add the role of jailer to that of mate. Others insist on the big front door being left open and no questions asked.

Take this letter:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Not long ago it was my job to dismantle the old family home, where my mother's parents and grandparents had lived. In the attic I came across some letters, written by my great grandmother just before the Civil War.

"And while they had no telephones, bathtubs or automobiles, I think wives of those days felt more secure about their husbands.

"In a letter to her sister, great grandmother wrote: 'Two roaring wood fires at either end of the long parlor make home more comfortable than the tavern, and William is content to sip his punch by his own fireside.'

"I suppose a man could hitch up his buggy or saddle his horse, but he couldn't get very far with either of them, and a wife didn't have to worry about where he spent his evenings and with whom, the way we do in this automobile age.

"I've been married three years. My husband goes out after dinner two and three evenings a week, and, whether to torment me or not, he will not say where he's going. I've tried to do the same thing with him, and have sat at my sister's house till one in the morning. When I returned home I found him snoring. Did he care where I'd been? Not much.

"It's my nature to be jealous. I can't help it; I'm so fond of him. Why doesn't he tell me where he goes after dinner? I've peeped into the garage and examined the car; haven't found anything compromising, but sometimes it's splashed with mud, showing he's been a long way.

"I'd love to turn back to the old days, when the roaring wood fires at either end of the long parlor, and hot punch, saved Grandma any worries as to where her husband was spending the evening.

"UNMODERN."

DEAR FRIEND:

It seems to me your great grandmother must have been writing about her more pleasant evenings at home, rather than the ones which might have worried her.

In those days, no man dreamed of forfeiting his personal liberty, or of asking permission to step out, or of stating where he was going.

If he was a landed proprietor, he summoned his coach or saddled his horse. Even the farm-wagon might have been requisitioned for a holiday away from the domestic open fire. But when he got good and ready, he went, and make no mistake about it, my dear lady.

Read the novels and general literature of that day and you will learn that, in spite of the difficulties of transportation, Grandpa had his fling.

You have a tremendous advantage over Grandma. It's much easier to get up a pleasant circle of friends than it was in the good old days.

Nearly everyone has a car, or a friend or relative who boasts one; country clubs, theaters, concerts, card games are accessible. And no woman need stay at home and eat her heart out, unless she enjoys that kind of thing.

Be more rational with that husband of yours. He's probably teasing you, and doing nothing worse than playing cards with the boys. If you try to lock up a man, he'll pit his wits against you to secure his freedom.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LONELY—Get a girl friend. Go out with her. And eventually you are bound to meet a boy friend. Yours is a common problem. Like thousands of my readers, you remain at home and hope that by some miracle a handsome boy will come riding up and swoop you off your feet. That doesn't happen any more. You've got to get into the social whirl if you really want to become a wife.

New Way to Keep the Hipline Smooth

POSED BY ROCHELLE HUDSON

Fatted Cells Are Broken Down and Excess Weight Magically Melted Away

By ARLINE GOULD

IN another month you will be swimming at the beaches! Summer isn't any longer a matter of vague anticipation—it is practically here. And—how does your figure shape up in a bathing suit?

Even if there's something of the Spartan in you and dieting holds no more terrors than a new permanent in mid-July, your hipline probably isn't as smooth as you would like it to be.

If your hips are ridiculously out of a proportion, don't make the mistake of dieting to reduce them to symmetry. It just can't be done. Calorie curtailment is the wrong method here.

You are quite likely to starve yourself into a wraith and still have an amazing inch measurement around the hips.

If you haven't heard about the new recontouring "bath" at a down-town salon, you've missed one of the best bets to slimness. For this bath removes fat only at the point where fat and bulges exist.

Unlike so many get-thin-quick methods, this bath is nothing to be dreaded. In fact, you will probably find it quite pleasant and loads of fun.

If you are curious about the way pounds and inches are taken off in the exact spots you want them off, here is the way it works. Wrapped in the warmth of a scientifically heated blanket, pores are started functioning as they never functioned before.

Slimness is achieved by the "purgation of superfluities," and if you've any doubt that fat is actually MELTED away, you've only to take one treatment to be assured that an obstinate hipline can be reduced materially—inches in fact.

Or if you are a victim of "fat-in-spots," that is, excess weight on certain other parts of the body—legs, arms, abdomen or neck—this is the treatment for you.

This is the only reducing method we know of whereby you can lose weight where you want to without injury to health and disposition. Prices are most moderate, particularly where localized reducing is desired, and you have the assurance besides that they are perfectly safe from a physical standpoint.

To learn the name of the salon where hip reducing is a specialized art, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, weekdays until 5, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"YOUR FIGURE MISTER!"

Learn Why Lou Gehrig Is the "Iron Horse"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IT takes the constitution of an "iron horse" to play almost 2000 consecutive games of baseball—and that's what Lou Gehrig has.

This husky Yankee player has already broken all records for consecutive games, and with his superb health there is nothing to stop him from playing the 2500 games that are his ambition.

Gehrig is probably the most phenomenally healthy baseball player of all time. His endurance and fitness are the products of a lifetime of sports activity, dating from kid days on the sand lot and college athletics to his place in baseball as the Yankees' most valuable player.

Here is a man who gets so much activity in his profession that he can use months of inactivity as a balance. Instead of planning all the activity possible during his vacation, he sees how little he can get! He needs rest to balance the strenuous demands of the ball season.

Even at that, he gets more exercise than the average man, for he gets 10 minutes leg-stretching exercise every morning. He leans against the piano in the living room and goes through calisthenics similar to those of a ballet dancer, to keep his famous legs in shape.

Gehrig is opposed to vigorous exercise between the seasons for the very good reason that all top-notch athletes run the risk of becoming muscle-bound from too much activity. Even for the business man who sits at a desk all day, however, he believes in moderation in exercise. For this type person, spurts of activity may prove a strain; regular mild exercise offers a better balance to the office routine.

Normal weight for Gehrig, whose height is six feet one, is 210 pounds, all muscle, and he has kept this weight for years. In one game he sometimes loses eight pounds, but he drinks enormous quantities of water and the weight is readjusted in a few hours. Toward the end of the season he finds it necessary in order to keep his weight up. Ordinarily he likes fairly light meals.

Mrs. Gehrig says that her husband is the least finicky man in the world about food. Yet, his food preferences fit in with a healthy diet. His two meals a day are breakfast at 10:30 o'clock and dinner after the game. For breakfast, he likes a large glass of orange juice, three eggs, toast and coffee.

For dinner: A salad of green vegetables or lettuce and tomatoes, roast, potatoes once or twice a week, plenty of vegetables, coffee and a glass of milk. He never eats dessert. Sometime during the day he manages to drink a quart of milk.

If your work is of a sedentary nature, you will benefit from the exercises in the leaflet, "Waistlines and Beltlines." Send a stamped, addressed envelope for this leaflet. Another leaflet of interest to the overweight man is "Man-Size Reducing Menus." Address your request to Ida Jean Kain, in care of this paper.

Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

When South passed to his partner's double of five hearts he was gambling "all over the lot." What actually influenced him to leave in the double was the presence of a singleton spade. He hoped that this would strike the Ace in partner's hand and result in a ruff.

I will not say that the chance for this was remote. For the sake of argument I will even concede that there was a good chance of this happy outcome. But even so, I most vigorously criticize South's utter dependence on this one hope.

If the singleton lead worked out well he would probably defeat the vulnerable opponents 200 points; if it did not, they would probably walk off with game and rubber, worth in the neighborhood of 1000 points.

Surely, then, it would have been more conservative to have taken out the double than to have left it in. South could be fairly sure that a six-diamond bid, not vulnerable, could not be severely hurt. His distribution alone guaranteed this.

Hence this pass, as I said in my opening sentence, was a highly aggressive one, whereas a bid would have been properly conservative.

Whooping Cough Care

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

FOR some unknown reason, whooping cough is unusually prevalent in the springtime. It is a disease that ordinarily affects only infants and young children.

Though it is not a serious ailment in itself, it often leads to some serious complication, such as bronchitis, bronchial-pneumonia, pneumonia or even tuberculosis.

Fortunately, as in diphtheria and scarlet fever, it is now possible to protect the young child against this disease. I have in mind the so-called "Sauer method" of inoculation. Your doctor will tell you about it.

Occasionally a child contracts the disease even though the inoculation has been used. This happens, usually because the child has been exposed to the disease before the end of the four months required to develop immunity against whooping cough.

Although it takes four months for the immunity to be built up, once it is acquired it lasts for several years.

SAVES MANY LIVES

The lives of many children will now be saved by this method of giving protection. It must not be forgotten, as I have told you, that this disease is a common cause for fatal cases of bronchitis, pneumonia and bronchial-pneumonia.

The danger of these complications is particularly dangerous in the very young child. It is most feared, too, in the anemic and undernourished youngster.

Whooping cough is caused by a germ known as the "bacillus pertussis." The incubation period, the time before exposure and the appearance of the symptoms, is 10 days, but sometimes the symptoms do not appear for a very much longer time after exposure.

At first the child appears to have a mild cold and has a cough. Frequent sneezing, running eyes, running nose and changes in the voice should arouse suspicion of infection.

But the cough is the most important sign. It is a dry and irritating one. As the disease progresses, the cough comes on in paroxysms with the characteristic "whoop."

Fashion Flashes

A LOVELY ensemble is one with the three-quarter length coat of thin wool of pastel dusty rose, with bands of silver fox around the hem of the coat and up the center of the back with the fox heads at waist level. The skirt is simple and straight and black, and the blouse is a darker rose than the coat, with a blue scarf that goes around the neck and is brought around the waist to form a sash.

• • •

• • •

Very appealing is a vividly printed crepe dress so simple it looks like nothing so much as a pretty slip. But at the waist is gathered a full overskirt of printed net going clear to the floor, falling open in front to show the printed dress. The headdress is a full, waist-length veil of the net.

HANEY ON CONDITIONS:

Business Slows Up, BUT MOST ANYTHING Could Start Boom

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 18—In general, it can be said that business activity has shown signs of "slowing up," but that no general decline has yet appeared.

More than that, the assumption of a general decline to come, rests on negative grounds rather than positive. By this I mean that the chief reason given is the termination of conditions that were causing business to boom. Thus, if something new were to arise in the way of a stimulant to buying, the boom might be resumed.

It is a wholesome condition to find so widespread a remembrance of "1929." There has been the usual difference of opinion as to the accumulation of inventories and over-extended installment buying, but nearly everyone has recognized that inflation was under way in March and we have not had to wait for a bitter-end struggle between bulls and bears and a cataclysmic crash to bring us to our senses.

At the same time, this situation probably means that sentiment and psychology have had more to do with inducing the reaction than is usually the case. And this, in turn, means that possibilities of a quick reversal are to be borne in mind.

The outcropping of political factors is quite consistent with the foregoing thoughts. It seems rather probable that during the next two months political uncertainties will have more influence upon markets than anything else.

* * *

The steel industry last week held close to peak levels, despite minor strike interruptions and some seasonal slowing up. The fact that steel production is high is no basis for a bullish forecast—if anything, it is the opposite. But the absence of important maladjustments, combined with continued good buying and definite prospects of such buying during the next two months is fair evidence that a cyclical peak has not been reached.

Incidentally, the price of steel scrap appears to be approaching the bottom of the reaction. The demand for this important raw material is often a good barometer of the outlook for the steel industry.

In the automobile industry, the demand for new cars continues unabated and the summer seasonal decline in production will be considerably later than usual. Indeed, the manufacturers may be buying steel for new models almost before active production of old ones ceases.

Incidentally, both the cotton textile and the lumber manufacturing industries have been well sustained of late, the former at a very high level. Weekly building data, though not conclusive, suggest hopes that this backward branch of industry may resume its gradual and difficult recovery.

* * *

It is not probable that the let-down in business will end until commodity prices are stabilized, and we must admit that wholesale prices averaged lower last week. Partly as an aftermath of the collapse in foreign speculation, European selling of cocoa, cotton and rubber, forced prices down. Hides, tin, sugar and wool tops declined.

It should be noted, however, that the commodity markets became more selective and mixed, as if nearing stability. (Wheat, oats, silk, hogs and lard were higher last week.)

Trade, both retail and wholesale, may be described as mixed and hesitant, which is about all that could be expected with so much uncertainty in the air. Not only have weather conditions been trying in some sections, but news of declining security and commodity markets makes the average person more cautious about spending.

The general talk about a summer slump in business, and renewed threats from Washington of doing things to business and the condition is easily understood.

Why anyone should fear "deflation" and sudden economy at Washington, however, is more than I can see. The provision of one and a half billion dollars for work relief goes through. The work reliefers and their families are staging marches on Washington. The President will evidently have no census of the unemployed, nor turn relief over to the states. Now comes a little slump in business to make an "emergency."

NEW Farm BILL

WHAT WOULD BE PERMITTED

Washington, May 18 (INS)—Enormous production of cotton and tobacco, an increase in corn production, a curb on average wheat crops and average production of rice would be permitted under the proposed new farm bill.

The measure would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to fix the amount of corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and rice each producer could market.

Penalties would be imposed on those who marketed more than their quotas. It would set out "normal suply levels" which could be produced to set in motion Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's ever-normal granary plan.

In the case of cotton, the bill provides for production of "a normal year's domestic and foreign consumption, plus 35 per centum thereof as an allowance for an ever-normal granary."

This, records of the Department of Agriculture showed today, would permit a cotton crop of 18,200,000 bales—more cotton than ever was produced in the United States in any one year. The record cotton crop of the country was 17,978,000 bales in the 1926-27 crop year.

Average cotton production for the ten years of 1922-31 was 14,089,300 bales. Under the AAA poduction control program, the average production was 11,579,750 bales.

The tobacco level is set at "a normal year's domestic consumption and exports, plus 200 per centum of a normal year's domestic consumption and 50 per centum of a normal year's exports as an allowance for an ever-normal granary." This would permit a 3,475,000,000-pound tobacco crop. The country's record tobacco crop was 1,647,377,000 pounds, in 1930; the pre-AAA average, 1,380,324,900 pounds, and the average crop under the AAA, 1,248,224,600 pounds.

The wheat provision would allow a 20 per cent increase over a normal year's domestic consumption, as an allowance for exports and the ever-normal granary. This would permit a crop of 780,000,000 bushels. The nation's record wheat crop, except for the post-war year of 1919, was 932,221,000 bushels in 1932. The ten-year average before the AAA was 910,890,000 bushels, and under the AAA, including the 1934 and 1936 drouths which cut into the harvest heavily, the average was 524,914,000 bushels.

A 5 per cent increase over the annual domestic consumption is allowed for corn. This would mean a crop of 2,400,000,000 to 2,500,000,000 bushels. The biggest year in the last decade was 2,514,613,000 bushels in 1932. The 10-year pre-AAA average was 2,202,627,900 bushels. Under the AAA, with the '34 and '36 drouth- year- crops included, the average was 1,889,746,000 bushels.

The rice provision, permitting 10 per cent over the domestic consumption, would allow a crop of about 43,432,000 bushels. The 1928-32 average was 43,000,000 bushels, which increased to 49,000,000 bushels for 1934 and 1935.

MONEY, Inflation VIEWED

WATERED DOLLARS

By Associated Press

Washington, May 18—Inflated dollars are, in one respect, like watered stock. One has merely to consider the dollar as a share in the real wealth of the land, which it is.

When shares distributed by a corporation are out of proportion to the actual value of the plant and going business, the stock is said to be watered.

When dollars distributed in actual money and credit are out of proportion to the country's wealth, both its wealth of existing commodities and goods and its capability of producing more, dollars are said to be inflated.

Those who favored continued heavy spending by government and insist the record public debt of more than $35,000,000,000 is not dangerously high say their opponents underestimate the real national wealth.

The opponents, in turn, contend the spenders underestimate the formidable character of the currency and credit situation confronting the country. They declare budget balancing is the road to safety.

The dispute traces back to the 1929 stock market crash. Fears born then drove money into hiding, made the normal, private credit-makers zealously cautious.

The money supplies become too small for the supply of goods. Commodities went begging for purchasers. Prices tumbled. People who wanted to buy could not lay hands on money. Unemployment spread.

Congress embarked in 1933 on a policy of increasing money supplies by huge expenditures for public works, relief and other purposes. It created credit—which is a form of money—by borrowing principally from banks.

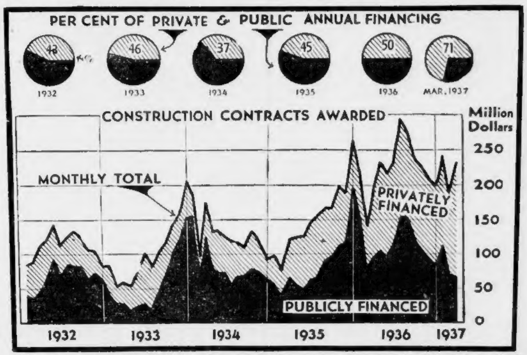
This increased deposits because the bank would set up an account in exchange, say, for a $1,000 bond. The government checked against that account to pay its expenses. The recipient of the check used the money to buy goods. He who sold to him did likewise, or deposited the cash in another bank, and on and on. The money turnover accelerated.

The theory is that this policy, called "reflation" and "pump-priming" by its advocates, works no evil so long as the government-created money is merely taking the place of private money, which is not being created in adequate amounts by the loan process.

When banks lend more freely and business speeds up, however, then some of its advocates say such additional creation of money by government threatens to make the supply become too much greater than the goods available.

That's the road to credit inflation and unjustified high prices, they argue. That's one reason why demands for decreased spending have mounted in Congress.

More Construction by Private Sources



Contracts awarded for building and other construction in March, 1937, were valued at more than $231,000,000, according to compilation by the F. W. Dodge Corporation. While this total was under the peak for this year, it was the highest March amount since 1931.

One extremely significant trend is evident in the accompanying chart. The part played by Governmental funds in financing construction has been lessened to a considerable degree. Funds from private sources, on the other hand, accounted for fully 71 per cent of the March total building value. In 1936 Governmental funds accounted for half the total construction value.

Of course, the total volume of building is still considerably below pre-depression levels. The total in 1936 was only 40 per cent of the 1928 construction peak.

SIDELIGHTS OF WALL STREET

New York, May 18—Railroad stocks, which drifted with the market yesterday, completely ignored favorable reports which kept rolling in.

Last week New York Central reported earnings of 90 cents a common share for the first 1937 quarter, against net loss of over $1,000,000 in the like 1936 period. Yesterday the Pennsylvania reported earnings of 39 cents a common share in the first quarter, against 18 cents a year ago; the Reading, 96 cents against 38 cents; the Atchison, 91 cents against net loss of $1,357,000. Of major reporting carriers, only Union Pacific showed a recession, earning but four cents a common share in the first 1937 quarter, against 10 cents a year ago. Even Chicago & Eastern Illinois, a "receivership road," turned in first quarter net income of $102,275 after taxes and charges, against net loss of $249,095 a year ago. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported slightly higher "own line" loadings for the week ended last Saturday, and an increase in total loadings was rung up by the Rock Island.

"Exempt" Collateral Loans Prove Problem

A problem for which no satisfactory solution has been found yet is what to do about the "exempt loans" by banks to brokers and others on securities collateral. These are loans made prior to May 1, 1936, when loan regulations were inaugurated. They constitute the unwieldly proportion of approximately 75 per cent of the total $1,116,000,000 loans to brokers and dealers in New York City. It had been hoped that the exempt loans in time would largely "dry up." But no material change has occurred. Informed quarters said yesterday that while the question has been "constantly alive," no definite steps have been decided upon by the Federal Reserve Board regarding the matter. One banker declared that the large proportion of "exempt loans makes regulation of loans a ridiculous situation." Local bankers a: understood to be sharply divided on a reported proposal to discontinue the exemption and "lump" them with the "regulated" borrowings.

Gold Hoarding Ban Called Complication

Problems originating in the excess stocks of gold held by the United States Treasury could be alleviated considerably, one commentator points out, if the prohibition against hoarding were lifted. The ban on private stocks of gold in bars or money was imposed at a time when there was more concern over financial conditions than at present, he recalled. The apprehension then existing has lergely disappeared and it is argued that cancellation of the restrictions would permit individuals to hold gold and would correspondingly reduce the pressure on the Treasury to absorb more and more offerings. However, before such a change in policy could become completely effective, similar changes in the regulations of other countries would have to be made also, it was pointed out.

United Air Lines Earnings Outlook

United Air Lines expects to be "in the black" for the final three-quarters of the current year. While there might be "a slight loss" for the present quarter, officials are hopeful that a net profit may be shown, in that traffic currently is running approximately 20 per cent above last year. For the first quarter of this year, the Lines showed net loss of $402,000, against net loss of $355,000 in the like 1936 period. How the second, third and fourth quarters figure in annual earnings, however, is shown in the fact that for the 12 months ended March 31 last, the company earned 22 cents a common share. The company reports heavy patronage of its "extra fare" skylines between New York and Chicago, and New York and the Pacific Coast. This seems to negate gossip that the big air lines are on the verge of a rate-cutting war.

* * *

Railroads Note New Industries

Some of the railroads of the Van Sweringen network make it a point to comment on industrial development in their territories in their annual reports. Missouri Pacific, for example, reports 482 new companies with a capital investment of close to $26,000,000 were located in the road's territory last year, bringing the carrier new freight at the rate of around 81,600 cars annually. Twelve industries in the Missouri Pacific territory closed temporarily, and will reopen this year, and 24 companies with an annual carload business of 3083 cars, closed permanently. New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, the "Nickel Plate" line, reports 57 new industries located in its territory in 1936. New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway, the "Gulf Coast" lines, reports 149 new industries were located on its lines last year and no industries of any consequence suspended operations.

Railroad, Motor Tax Comparison

A railroad executive tells why the railroads are "always kicking about the taxes they pay." He says: "The railroads pay 7 cents out of each dollar of their revenues in taxes, while the motor vehicles pay but 3 cents, an advantage of 4 cents out of each dollar of revenues in favor of the motors. Such advantages as this enable the motor vehicles to underbid the rails for traffic. Of course, the motor vehicles pay taxes in the way of license fees and taxes on gasoline, but not more than are paid by the private owners of automobiles, for which the highways were originally built."

RETAIL Spending UPWARD

HIGHEST SINCE 1931

New York, May 18 (AP) — Swelling industrial payrolls and increased farm purchasing power stand in the background of a sharp upswing in retail spending in March and April to the highest point since 1931.

In those two months, the public spent $892,900,000 for general merchandise in department stores, mail order organizations, variety and dry goods stores, an increase of 13.3 per cent, the International Statistical Bureau reported.

Significan, retail trade circles say, is the fact this increase over last year was scored despite widespread strikes.

The American public, the survey said, is spending no more freely than is justified by income received. To support this contention it points out consumer income in the first quarter rose 11.9 per cent, while expenditures advanced only 10.9 per cent.

The discrepancy, analysts believe, is acounted for by more aggressive spending for travel and by a gradual return of the savings bank habit.

Playing an important part in the upturn of retail spending was the more liberal consumer outlay for furniture and other household items, on which 17.2 per cent more was spent than in the like period last year.

This development retailers explain in terms of increased residential construction and what they term a general revival of interest in the home.

As these commentators see it, in the post-war period there was a sharp shifting of expenditure from domestic products to the automobile and motor accessories. Gradually, in many families, the automobile moved into the "necessity" classification.

The trend of commodity prices in England and the United States seem to have followed somewhat divergent courses during April if one studies the various indices. However, this is probably due to the compilation of home averages on a daily or weekly basis, while the English figures come to us in monthly form. The Dow-Jones index, which this writer follows, fell from an early April peak of 81.80 to a low of 71.04 in May to date. The English figure for the month April is now reported at a new high, but subsequent happenings in the commodity marts should leave their mark when the index is compiled for May.

Boston Stocks

STOCKS Break, Then REBOUND

UTILITIES LAGGARD

New York, May 18—The stock market broke into new low ground for the year today then recovered a good portion of early losses.

Losses at one time ran to 3 points, as a long list of pivotal stocks dropped to new lows for the year. The recovery was led by steels, rails and motors, most of which substituted small gains for losses.

Movements in U. S. Steel were typical. The stock opened fractionally higher, increased this to more than a point, then dropped under its previous close. Before noon, however, it had been moved to a new top for the day, up well over a point.

Utilities showed little tendency to rally. All active issues in the section were at new bottoms, losses running to a point.

Others to reach new lows included American Can, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil of California, American Tobacco "B," U. S. Smelting, Boeing, Otis Steel and Air Reduction.

Bonds were highly irregular, including the government issues. Grains spurted, with wheat up as much as 3 cents a bushel. Cotton gained 50 cents a bale.

Those favoring the rails noted preliminary figures indicating total revenue freight loadings last week approximated 770,000 cars, compared with 767,481 in the preceding week.

While April carrier earnings thus far reported have been especially cheering to Wall Street quarters, some analysts felt traffic receipts were likely to show divergent trends during the summer and fall months if industrial activity were leveled off, as now thought probable.

As an offset to an income recession for Eastern roads depending largely on manufacturing shipments it was believed many Western lines would show substantial increases over a year ago if harvests come up to expectation.

The French franc at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions was off .00 11-16 of a cent at 4.47⅞ cents. Sterling was 1-16 of a cent higher at $4.94 7-16.

New England Tel. $1.50 Dividend

A dividend of $1.50 was declared by directors of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company payable June 30 to stock of record June 10.

The current dividend, while 25 cents a share less than that paid for the first quarter, is the same as for the corresponding period of the past four years.

Commenting on the present declaration President John J. Robinson said:

"After payment of a dividend of $1.75 in the first quarter, the company had a deficit of $280,000 which it was hoped might be made up in the succeeding quarters when earnings are usually higher. Increased expenditures, however, due largely to wage increases amounting to $1,500,000 per year, together with the first quarter deficit caused the directors to return to the $1.50 dividend."

POLICY Making STUDIED

TRADE PROGRAM

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Universal Service

The recent realignment of General Motors executives was part of a broad plan to separate policy-making from operations.

The analogy could be profitably carried over into the setup of the federal government.

For example, the State Department, in the reciprocal trade program, attempts to formulate policies and to "sell" them to foreign governments.

If the same arrangement prevailed in a private corporation it would amount to permitting the salesmen to set prices and credit terms.

[illegible] have [illegible] better to have a federal foreign trade board, or perhaps the Department of Commerce, set trade policies under specific instructions from Congress.

Then the State Department, in its contact with foreign nations could do the merchandising job.

In spite of recent improvement the construction industry is proceeding at a vastly lower proportion of the pre-depression pace than business generally.

Dilettante housing students discount even the recorded improvement, complaining that not sufficient building is taking place for the low income groups. Moreover, they profess a lack of [illegible] with technological trends in housing.

Irrespective of such comment the dollar volume of residential building last month jumped to the highest total since May, 1930. For the first four months of the year, private building advanced 69 per cent whereas public contracts declined by 23 per cent.

Reviewing these statistics Philip E. Bliss, president of the Warner & Swasey Company, makers of machine tools, at Cleveland, expressed the opinion that the total volume of industrial production in the United States may, in the comparatively near future, rise to levels considerably higher than those of 1929. He explained:

"This conviction is founded upon three main factors — breadth of present recovery, new consumers added since 1929, and the pressing need for residential construction.

"The first element—breadth of present recovery—is graphically illustrated by the current situation in our own industry. Turret lathes, our chief item of manufacture, are used in practically every type of metal working activity. A list of our shipments, for any month covers such a wide range that it would constitute practically a cross index of American manufacture.

"The significant feature about our sales is the fact that an increased demand for our products has come from every different industry to which we sell regardless of size and regardless of location. No one industry and no one territory shows a much larger upturn than any other industry or territory.

"Our sales show that all types of manufacturing enterprise, large and small, throughout the entire country, are operating at a higher rate, turning out more products. This indicates that the present recovery does not represent merely a forward spurt on the part of a few outstanding industries, but is universal and rests upon a very broad foundation."

At the height of the Rockefeller prosperity, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at a time when there was much talk about Rockefeller having become a billionaire, confided to me that the figure was an exaggeration.

While he did not [illegible] language, I got the impression that the Rockefeller fortune [illegible] one time approximate three-quarters of a billion, $750,000,000.

Rockefeller philanthropies [illegible] being expanded tremendously. And they continued to be expanded for years.

My guess is that for the [illegible] dozen or 15 years the Rockefeller distributions have exceeded [illegible] and that the fortune [illegible] probably under rather than [illegible] a billion today.

500 AMERICANS DIE FIGHTING FOR SPAIN

Madrid, May 18 (AP)—American volunteer battalions used continually as government shock troops in the Spanish civil war, were estimated today to have lost almost a third of their number in death.

Reliable sources placed the number of United States citizens killed while fighting on the government side at more than 500 or 30 per cent of the 17[illegible] reported to have enlisted since the conflict started, [illegible] months ago.

A few of the volunteers were professional air pilots and technicians, and a few were soldiers of fortune, but the overwhelming majority lacked previous military experience.

The largest contingent of Americans in the service of the republic has been the 16th Infantry, or Abraham Lincoln battalion, which members of the unit said was recruited in the United States.

147 DIE IN BATTLE

This battalion originally was composed of 467 men who entered Spain last December and January and went into the thick of the [illegible] on the Jarama river, south of Madrid on February 12.

[illegible] two weeks later according to one member of the outfit, 147 [illegible] of the 467 had been lost and many others incapacitated by [illegible] and sickness.

Fifty of the slain were buried [illegible] where they fell near Tar[illegible] [illegible] orders of the battalion [illegible].

The first commander of the battalion was an ex-sea captain. He [illegible] succeeded by a former instructor of economics in an American university who was wounded in the same fighting.

[illegible] a man claiming to have [illegible] United States Army [illegible] over command of the Lincoln battalion.

USE ASSUMED NAMES

Many of the Americans fight under assumed names, with even the commanders guarding their identities. Many of them are said to have been issued Spanish passports under Spanish names.

A number of Americans have arrived in Spain since the ban on volunteers went into effect last February 20. Some succeeded in crossing the French frontier on foot while others were halted by border patrols.

After the heavy casualties suffered in the Jarama fighting the Lincoln battalion was reorganized and sent to the Guadalajara front [illegible] east of Madrid.

There it was broken up, some of the units going to Pozoblanco on the Cordoba front in the south and others being moved further eastward to the Teruel front for the A[illegible] offensive.

MANY FRENCH SOLDIERS

Competent military observers estimated 1000 British volunteers have enlisted on the government side and that 600 of these have been killed.

The number of French volunteers was placed by these observers at 1[illegible] of whom 3000 have been slain.

Robert Merriman, former University of California instructor, was reported last March 13 to have been taken to a hospital at Murcia with a fractured arm and shrapnel wounds in his shoulder suffered when he led the Abraham Lincoln battalion on the Jaramwa front South of Madrid.

The reports said he resigned a two-year scholarship for European study to assume command of the battalion.

U. S. Air Derby Ban

Lindbergh Frowns On Ocean Race

By ROBERT G. NIXON

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

Washington, May 18—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who first conquered the Atlantic air lane from New York to Paris, frowned on the French plan, now banned by federal edict, for a mass New York-Paris air race this summer.

The Lone Eagle independently arrived at the same conclusion as U. S. Aeronautical officials that the hazards of the race might result in useless loss of life and endanger the successful launching in the near future of regular cross-ocean commercial passenger flights.

Lindbergh flatly rejected a French tender that he lend his name to the perilous venture, International News Service is able to disclose today.

The $50,000 air derby, which drew 22 entrants from six nations, was planned to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Lindbergh's historic flight and to launch the Paris International Exposition.

DECLINED AS SPONSOR

French aviation officials suggested it would be fitting if Lindbergh acted as honorary sponsor of the race. He firmly declined.

His declination was followed yesterday, as revealed exclusively by International News Service, by a Department of Commerce ruling barring the race.

Commerce officials viewed the race as a "stunt" and ruled it "would be of a hazardous nature involving risk of needless loss of life and consequently might have an adverse effect on public confidence in the safety of air travel."

Amelia Earhart Putnam's second attempt to girdle the globe at its equatorial center, however, will be exempted from the ban, the Department of Commerce declared.

Mrs. Putnam's flight was licensed several months ago and the license will not be revoked, it was asserted. Her first attempt ended in a crackup as she was taking off on the second leg of the adventurous flight in Hawaii. The plane has been rebuilt and her second attempt is scheduled to begin late this month from California.

Meanwhile, the Aero Club of France, which was sponsoring the race together with the French Air Ministry, rejected the proposal of the U. S. Aeronautical Association that the race be postponed for one year, it was learned. The Aero Club cabled the N. A. A. that international air rules forbid modification of plans for the derby.

In the face of this French decision U. S. officials insisted that, international sporting rules to the contrary notwithstanding, the race is definitely and finally off.

"There isn't going to be any race," Colonel J. M. Johnson, assistant secretry of commerce, eiterated. "No permits will be granted."

The State Department's formal communication to the French ambassador made the decision official.

TREATIES CITED

The French, it was learned, pin their hopes that the race might yet be held on air treaties existing between the U. S. and Great Britain Italy and Sweden. No such treaty has yet been signed between the U. S. and France or Rumania, the two other countries with entries in the derby.

The French contention is that the United States automatically must submit the flight of the nine planes entered by Italy, the two from Britain and one from Sweden. They admit the United State could ground the four French entries, the three from Rumania and the three U. S. planes.

COAST K. OF C. JOIN RED WAR

(Special to Boston Evening American)

San Francisco, May 18—"Fight Communism!"

That keynote of the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Knights of Columbus of California, was sounded with enthusiasm of a battle cry in a Lakeland session.

Fifteen hundred delegates launched the "militant drive" against Communism, wildly cheering speakers who urged the anti-Communist campaign be made the first order of business for Knights of this state.

A plea to the supreme office for a fund of $5000 to combat Communist propaganda was made by six councils of Southern California.

Opening the attack, Joseph J. Roshorough, state deputy, was repeatedly interrupted with cheers. He said:

"The 500,000 members of the Knights of Columbus in the United States and in Canada are fighting the three major threats against our civilization of today—Communism, irreligion and family destroyers.

Joseph Scott, prominent Los Angeles attorney and past state deputy of the order, made final appeal for a "fight to the finish." He said:

"Communism makes the child the creature of the state. Communism deprives the child of all parental authority and influence of the church."

MERRILL TIP WINS QUINCY MAN $25

By the News Tip Editor

Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, "Coronation" round trip fliers to England, landed their giant plane at the Squantum Naval Air Base in Quincy to check their gasoline supply, their first stop since leaving England on a flight across the Atlantic.

A Quincy airplane pilot sighted the giant Lockheed-Electra plane circling the Squantum airport, ran to a nearby phone and flashed the NEWS to the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN NEWS TIP EDITOR. He is winner of first prize of $25, in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser News Tip contest.

Second prize of $10, was split this week between a Roxbury housewife and a Woburn stenographer.

First half, $5, goes to the Roxbury woman for an EXCLUSIVE tip on a second set of twins being born to a Roxbury mother. The remaining $5, was awarded to the Woburn tipster for first information on a Pepperell crime story.

Third prize of $5 was awarded to a Bangor, Me., radio operator for his tip on Dick Merrill being sighted over Newfoundland.

The following ten one dollar awards were made: A Lawrence writer for her tip on a man seriously injured when he toppled from a high pole; a Walpole salesman for information on an attempted robbery; a Somerville laborer for tip on a baby plunging 30 feet from a second story window; a Rockport truck driver for a tip on an automobile crash, a Boston clerk for feature story; a Somerville schoolgirl for a police story; a South Boston laborer for information on police recovering the body of a fisherman, a Beachmont salesman for a fire, a Medford housekeeper for information on a man being killed when crushed, and a South Boston bookkeeper for a fire.

Each week the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser award $50 in prizes for News Tips. All you have to do when you see or hear of NEWS is call the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN NEWS TIP EDITOR at LIBERTY 4000. We do the rest.

You don't pack a bag to go downtown to your office

Some say it is even easier to New York by air from their homes on Boston's North Shore, than it is to their offices downtown in Boston. Boston airport is conveniently reached. Leave your car there. The air ride in "American's" luxurious 21-passenger Flagships is a tonic. Perhaps you can see your own home, in the scenic panorama, below, as you leave Boston. It's only 84 minutes to New York! Smooth! Quiet! Comfortable! Time to read a newspaper, to look at some business reports or take a snooze—and there you are! You are whisked from Newark airport to downtown New York in a chauffeur-driven limousine. You arrive as clean—and less fatigued—than you do at your own office in Boston. After you have finished in New York, there is the enjoyable Flagship ride back to Boston. Pick up your car and you're home for the night. That is A.A.* efficiency! It conserves your energy, enables you to accomplish more in less time, and all of this without being away from home any longer than going to your own office in Boston. Women also enjoy this deluxe service. They can have a full day in New York as easily as they can be downtown all day in Boston. Ticket Office: 140 Federal St., or your travel agent.

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

More and more the historical writing of today is coming to deal, not with celebrities and great events, not with presidents and statesmen and generals and wars and important legislation, but with the backgrounds to these events, the forgotten deeds of unimportant people.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

More and more letters and memoirs and diaries are being dug up and published in the hope that they may furnish a paragraph or a footnote to the great varied epic of the American people. And our historical fiction is reflecting that background more and more. Such books as "Gone With the Wind" and McKinley Cantor's "Not Long Remember" (a novel of Gettysburg's three days) are compact of the otherwise forgotten and unregarded incidents that make up a family's record of those times.

As a matter of fact the McKinley Cantor book flashed through my mind when I received from the University of Pennsylvania Press a little book called "South After Gettysburg," containing the letters of Cornelia Hancock, a Civil War nurse of Salem, New Jersey.

Cornelia Hancock's family still lives in that part of the country. She died in 1926, leaving some of her war-time letters to a connection of my wife's, Mrs. Henrietta Stratton Jacquette, who is one of the trustees of the Quaker college at Swarthmore.

Was Nurse After Battle of Gettysburg

This little book of 172 pages reproduces many of the letters Cornelia Hancock wrote back to her relatives and friends when she decided to go to Gettysburg a day or two after the battle. She remained a nurse until the end of hostilities and saw "the last review" in Washington which wrote period to the war.

This is the kind of material which modern imaginative writers love to find and draw upon for the background in their tales. Such incidents are real and homely and actual. They help to furnish that willing suspension of disbelief of which Coleridge spoke and which the older-fashioned "costume" novels, romantic in their method, usually lacked. Nowadays they abound in such material and thereby greatly increase their authenticity.

In her foreword Mrs. Jacquette speaks of the part played by the Friends or Quakers, who were non-combatants by faith and conviction, but who worked usefully in alleviating the horrors of war. Like Walt Whitman, who was also a Quaker and a non-combatant, who toiled in the field dressing stations and in Washington hospitals as well, this young woman, of gentle breeding and the Friends' persuasion, followed the war from Gettysburg to the end, and then turned to work among the poor negroes, in the slum districts of Philadelphia, the Children's Aid and in a forerunner of modern "housing" effort in a great city.

Ruled Too Young to Go to Battle Front

Cornelia Hancock was a young and pretty girl of twenty-three, so youthful looking that when she set out for Gettysburg as soon as news of the battle reached her she was stopped at Philadelphia by Dorothea Dix, the famous war-time nurse, and pronounced too young and unsuitable to go to the front. While the dispute waxed warm above her head, she settled the matter by climbing aboard the train and sticking there till she got to Gettysburg.

It was three days after the battle. There was then no Red Cross, only the Sanitary and Christian Commissions. The girl was too inexperienced to nurse, but she went about taking down names and addresses and writing letters for the dying. She also helped herself to the stores.

Fed Famished Soldiers With Bread and Jam

There was not a spoon, knife, fork or plate to be had so she went about with a loaf of over-baked bread in one hand and a jar of jelly in the other, tore the bread into bits, spread jelly with a stick, and got some food into the famished men. She mixed condensed milk and whiskey and served it in tin cans.

That was her initiation. She went through the war. Her fiance was captured and imprisoned for months, but she went on. And constantly and voluminously she wrote to her dear ones at home. It is an extraordinarily interesting document, as fresh as if it had been written yesterday, and well worth reading.

GIVE UP Firetrap SCHOOL

CAMBRIDGE TO REPAIR OTHERS

Acting on a report of State Department of Public Safety investigators that several schools in Cambridge are unsafe either because of a fire hazard or weakness in structure, members of the Cambridge school committee today had taken steps to correct cited defects.

As a result of the investigators' report the Taylor school, an old two-story brick and wood structure, is to be abandoned.

The center building of the Webster school, another brick and wood building housing more than 700 pupils, is to be rebuilt.

Cambridge High and Latin school is to be remodeled that it may be regarded as a safe structure for 2000 pupils.

Repairs Too Costly

In announcing the closing of the Taylor school, school committee members stated the decision was reached after it was found the necessary alterations would be too costly.

Children from the Taylor School district wil be sent to the nearby Putnam and Thorndyke schools.

Money to make the necessary repairs at the Cambridge High and Latin School and to replace the center section of the Webster School on Upton street will be requested of the City Council by Mayor John D. Lynch at the next meeting of that body.

It was estimated today that if all of the requirements of safety in all of the schools as recommended by the State investigators are installed that the cost would be in excess of $100,000.

Seek WPA Funds

If the City Council acts favorably on the request for school reconditioning appropriations, necessary funds will be sought from the Federal Public Works Administration.

The report of the State investigators which named the Webster and Taylor schools and Cambridge High and Latin school as unsafe, submitted to the Cambridge school officials on May 4, was revealed exclusively in the Boston Evening American yesterday.

Although it had been announced that the report of the state investigators would be made public at the school committee meeting, it was decided to withhold it until the State officials have completed their investigation.

Unidentified Man Found in Street

Clutching a medical tome dealing with mental diseases, a well dressed man, believed to be a physician, was taken to City Hospital early today, where he is on the danger list.

He was found lying in Shawmut street, near Bradford, South End, with a fractured skull. Police believe he was injured when he tripped and struck his head against the curb.

His wallet was missing when he was picked up and he had only 39 cents in his pocket. Police, however, do not believe he was attacked and robbed.

He was wearing a grey soft hat, grey topcoat, oxford grey suit and black shoes. All were of superior material. A soft white shirt and a pocket handkerchief both bore the embroidered initials, "R. T. H."

Death Strikes 3d Time in 5 Months

Death struck for the third time in five months in a Cambridge family today when Miss Elizabeth Lynch, 58, died at her home on Copley street.

Her sister, Miss Nora Lynch, 27, was killed in an automobile accident last December 17. Her brother, William Lynch, 57, of Eustis street, Cambridge, was buried only last Sunday.

Miss Elizabeth Lynch, who lived with another sister, Anna, was stricken suddenly. She is survived in addition to Anna by two brothers, Michael F., and Daniel T. Lynch.

MELANSON SUIT RULING WAITED

With final arguments concluded by counsel in the $50,000 heart balm suit filed by Celia Hammond, attractive Tamworth, N. H., nurse, against Gregory Melanson of Laconia and Swampscott, Judge Walter L. Collins of the Suffolk Superior Court today had the case under advisement.

The last day of the proceedings went forward with the plaintiff absent from the courtroom and the judge hearing the case without jury was told by Thomas H. Mahoney, counsel for Miss Hammond, that Melanson was a "corpulent Casanova" who would soon come in to a $1[illegible] share of his late father's estate.

Mahoney argued the girl did not know that Melanson was a married man and not divorced until May 6, 1935.

The defendnat, sitting with bowed head, heard his own counsel, Roger B. Coulter, refer to him as "wilful and wayward, hard to control and bent on having his own way." Coulter argued that the 2[illegible]-year-old suitor had loved Miss Hammond but that the latter's jealousy destroyed the love.

Thieves Loot 2 Newton Homes

Two Newton homes were looted by thieves during the night and more than $100 in various articles stolen, police learned today.

Arthur W. Neill of Reservoir avenue reported the following articles missing: A $40 radio, a .38-calibre revolver, five ties valued at $7.50 and a pair of binoculars worth $20.

Theft of women's clothing valued at $50, was reported stolen by Brigham K. Watkins of Prospect avenue. A window leading off the porch was forced open. In both cases no one was home at the time.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, is hailed as Club Woman No. 1 by delegates to the Federation of Women's Clubs at Swampscott. She will be married in the fall.

No. 1 Clubwoman Will Become Bride

By BETTY DI PESA

Title of Number One Club Woman of the United States is much less thrilling to Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton than her coming autumn wedding.

Fluttery as a June bride-to-be as she received kisses from well-wishers, the "perfect club woman" as she was termed by fellow members of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs convening at Swampscott, confided:

"I am thrilled. I am looking forward so to returning to a life of domesticity. I didn't think I would feel quite like this at my age."

WIDOWED 18 YEARS

Mrs. Poole, who [illegible] her middle fifties, has been widowed 18 years. She recently [illegible] her engagement to Dr. Henry Gilbert Reynolds of Kentucky.

And she will give up her active [illegible].

"I don't think my husband would approve of too much of it," she stated.

Mrs. P[illegible] dean of women [illegible] College [illegible] N. H. [illegible] from that [illegible].

"You are not a career woman?" she was asked.

"I should say not," was the decisive answer.

IDEAL WOMAN

Speaking of her conception, Mrs. Poole said it was a [illegible] one. Dr. Reynolds [illegible] New Hampshire.

Mrs. [illegible] woman:

A sense of humor most of all. High ideals, liberal-mindedness, and understanding.

PUBLIC Job Training HIT

CLUBWOMEN ASKED TO AID

"The United States has the most expensive educational system in the world, and uses it least for training persons for government offices, especially the diplomatic service."

This declared Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, chairman of the education department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of [illegible] at the 45th convention of the Massachusetts State Federation [illegible] at the New Ocean House in Swampscott.

"Hundreds of thousands of young people who cannot find employment today should be urged to continue their education, and should be assisted by the government in further education," Mrs. Whitehurst advocated.

Women Can Aid

"Club women can aid in the intellectual life of their communities by first educating themselves as to proposed changes in social and economic reconstruction, and then teaching other groups in the community."

Social [illegible] of the morning session, Mrs. Edward Hammett of Swampscott, [illegible] chairman of the [illegible] public safety committee, [illegible] parents with the duty of educating their children to traffic safety.

[illegible] lawlessness on the highways, Mrs. Hammett declared:

"We must teach our children not to brag about how fast they can drive an automobile. Our children of today are the drivers of tomorrow. We must teach them to want to drive carefully."

The convention has yet to take action on a resolution condemning President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan.

FIGHTS CURLEY 'SIGNATURE'

Legality of an appointment by former Governor Curley, which carried only his facsimile signature, was questioned in Supreme Court today.

On the former governor's last day in office, Philip J. Russell, Sr., of Fall River, a former governor's [illegible], was named clerk of the First District Court of Southern Worcester County. The appointment was confirmed by the council January 7, but was not actually signed by Curley, according to court testimony.

Seeking to force Secretary of State Frederick W. Cook to sign his commission as clerk of the court, Russell brought a petition for a writ of mandamus.

Before Judge Henry T. Lummus today Secretary Cook testified that the order appointing Russell clerk of the court had not been signed [illegible] facsimile [illegible] affixed by the former governor's secretary.

[illegible] was continued until May 21.

Fr. Toomey Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral arrangements were completed today for the Rev. Mortimer E. Toomey, for more than 30 years a parish priest in South Boston, who died last night in the rectory of the Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston.

Father Toomey had been at the Gate of Heaven Church since 1932.

The Right Reverend Francis A. Burke of the Blessed Sacrament Church, Jamaica Plain, will celebrate the funeral mass at 10 a. m. tomorrow in Gate of Heaven Church. The Rev. William J. Casey of St. Thomas' Church will be the deacon, with the Rev. Michael Coffey, of Salem, as subdeacon.

Father Toomey was born 77 years ago in Chelsea, attended St Charles College in Maryland and the Grand Seminary in Montreal. Ordained in Montreal in 1883, Father Toomey [illegible] the Immaculate Conception Church at New [illegible] the Immaculate Conception Church, Ma[illegible].

Orchestra Members Enjoy Applause

What a dine-and-dance customer thinks of the orchestra he is at liberty to express. He may applaud, keep silent, or even hiss, if he desires.

What a bandman thinks of the dancers doesn't often find expression. Frank Ward, head man of the orchestra at the Hotel Bradford's Penthouse, says the players enjoy applause and make better music when encouraged.

Excepting the musicians who have to turn their backs to the floor, bandmen get as much entertainment out of watching the dancers as the dancers do out of strutting their stuff. Graceful dancing stirs the orchestra to greater efforts. Sometimes, when there's a particularly agile couple on the floor, the band will play extra encores, just to see them dance again!

Spare the Elms, Foresters Warn

Fully one-half the shade trees that line New England streets and parks are elms and the elm trees of the nation are in danger, according to the American Forestry Association. Unless Dutch Elm Disease is eliminated, upward of a billion of elms in the country will be destroyed.

In its crusade, the association points out that New England cities and hamlets have long recognized the necessity for doctoring and nursing shade trees. Not so much care is shown elsewhere, and the elm is no longer peculiar to this section. There are six times as many elms in Dallas, Texas, as in Boston, which has 48,000. Springfield has 27,500 and Medford 19,500.

They figure the cash value of 2,777,000 elms in Massachusetts as worth about $100,000,000. More than one half of them are shade trees.

JOE CRONIN ON WAY TO BOSTON

RED SOX MANAGER WILL JOIN TEAMMATES TOMORROW

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 18, 1937

MR. BOSTON

Welcome Home, Joe Cronin | Danno Spurs Title Quest

By JACK CONWAY

THE MEN OF Cronin are back in town for a home stay which will carry them through May 31. During this time they play Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Washington and New York in the order named.

Mr. Boston

By the time they go on the road again the fans will have received a good opportunity to judge whether the club is going to get any place in the American League pennant race.

Joe Cronin's tremendous hitting has been one of the chief factors in the success scored by the Sox so far this season. Cronin has been playing amazing baseball both in the field and at bat. Everything he does appears to be right. It is unfortunate that he met with such a painful accident in Washington yesterday. This injury will keep him out of the game for several days.

[illegible] that Joe displayed real courage and fighting [illegible] members of his club had a tendency to accept [illegible] He was always in there trying even when the [illegible] looked hopeless.

[illegible] been a good hitter since he first gained fame in [illegible] In order for him to have his present batting [illegible] it has been necessary for him to get the [illegible] player who belts the agate for over .400 [illegible]

[illegible] flashes of hitting since his return to [illegible] unfortunate in being stricken by the flu [illegible] got off to an excellent start in the [illegible]

[illegible] a natural hitter and should end up the [illegible] well over .300. When Foxx is going on [illegible] pitchers have a mental hazard which [illegible] to weaker batters on the Sox.

Pitching is still the chief Sox problem. The team has plenty of power on the offense and a good defense. Give the team better than average pitching end it will win many ball games between now and October.

DANNO HEADS TOWARD TITLE

There are two reasons for this spirit on the part of the young [illegible] he is anxious to beat Clark in view of the fact the [illegible] wrestler who has pinned him since his return [illegible] States last fall, and also on account of the fact [illegible] with Yvon Robert for the [illegible]

I saw O'Mahony [illegible] Rube Wright of Texas at the [illegible] Danno showed more speed [illegible] wrestling finish than he has for any of his [illegible] At the age of 23, O'Mahony has an excel[illegible] championship.

Wrestlers often keep improving until they are 30 years of age. They can hold their top form until they are 33 to 35. Then they start to go back.

The old-time wrestlers often lasted until they were 50. The modern grapplers take such terrific poundings that few of them are physically fit to wrestle after they are 40.

O'Mahony as champion was subjected to one of the most severe schedules of matches ever given to a wrestler. In one year he took part in 117 bouts in the United States and Canada. He came through these matches without suffering any serious injury.

Danno has the happy faculty of being able to make long hops by plane and train without losing sleep, while his appetite is always good.

He picked up ten pounds while champion. This weight has hardened on his huge frame, and he is confident he will win from Clark and then go on to upset Robert.

Clark's followers insist the Scotchman is a more finished wrestler than Danno and that class will decide the issue in the Garden tussle.

O'Mahony and Clark have already wrestled twice. Clark won the only fall scored in the first match, while in the second tussle the decision was a draw.

RANDOM SHOTS AT TARGET

I DON'T SHARE the opinion of the pessimists who claim Bob Feller's pitching arm has collapsed and that he is a washup as far as big league baseball is concerned . . . There is no question that young [illegible] used up too much energy in pitching and that he has subjected [illegible] arm to a strain that requires a long rest, but I think the Cleveland sensation will come back to win many ball games . . . You cannot count an 18-year-old ball player out merely because he happens to [illegible] up with a lame arm . . . Eleven years ago, in New Orleans, I saw Charles Ruffing, then with the Red Sox, forced out of the game with a bad arm after striking out three men . . . He had used up too much power in fanning the side . . . Ruffing, of course, recovered from his arm strain, and as recently as last year won more than 20 ball games.

[illegible] absence from the lineup has been a severe blow to [illegible] . . . Apart from the ball games this colorful [illegible] were pitching regularly, Bob would draw [illegible] into the box office . . . He would be the [illegible] Sunday attraction in baseball.

Pat Hanley, B. U. football coach, has one superstition . . . It is the number 7 . . . His telephone number is Newton North 7777 . . . His auto registration is 77,700, while his brand new pass from Suffolk Downs is No. 2547, which has almost as many 7 combinations as a pair of dice . . . Of course Pat expects to have another strong football eleven next fall, and would be satisfied with a 7—0 victory over Boston College.

Cronin Leaves Washington; Joins Team Tomorrow

By JOE CASHMAN

Released from a Washington hospital today, Joe Cronin, player-manager of the Boston Red Sox left immediately for Boston where the Sox are playing the Cleveland Indians.

Catcher "Rick" Ferrell may be even worse than that. He was struck on the thumb of his throwing hand and forced out of action in trying to catch a foul tip in the clutch inning of yesterday's fray.

The extent of the injury won't be known until X-rays are taken here today. It's extremely unlikely, however, that he'll be able to play this afternoon, regardless of what the examination reveals.

Other casualties include Fabian [illegible] who was [illegible] Ted Olson who [illegible]

TWO GAMES FROM ROOF

The Fenway flock can [illegible] along without the last mentioned cripples, but the worst tragedy that [illegible] at present would be to have Cronin and Ferrell [illegible] handicapped very long by their present ailments.

Foxx [illegible] batting at an amazing 450 [illegible] has been the team's top thumper and leading run-rescuer since the bell rang while little Rick is the only other right-handed hitting regular batting over .300 at this writing.

Happily, indications are that within a few days [illegible] Ferrell will be back [illegible] [illegible] the season.

Despite their misfortunes thus far, the Yawkey yeomen are at the .500 mark in the standing with nine victories and as many defeats, and are within two games of the roof, occupied by the confounding Connie Macks.

MATCHES TODAY

Brae Burn at Commonwealth
Charles River at Wollaston
Country Club at Woodland
Oakley at Wellesley
Weston at Winchester

By BILL GRIMES

With its first team available, Commonwealth, odds on favorite to win the title, hopes to regain some of the ground lost through its setback by Weston this afternoon on its home course at the expense of Brae Burn.

Last week Commonwealth was [illegible] by Weston, losing [illegible] 12 [illegible].

[illegible] Freddie [illegible] Captain [illegible] was forced to [illegible] combinations before the Weston match and it would seem [illegible] a pair of [illegible].

Danno Reverts to 'Whip'

Dan O'Mahony, former world heavyweight wrestling champion, [illegible] reverting to the Irish Whip [illegible] which he [illegible] is the reason for his sensational comeback.

"The Irish Whip carried me to the heavyweight championship," Dan declares. "Then, when wrestlers started working on a defense against it, I tried my luck on other holds. But there is no hold so effective and deadly as the Whip, and in the future I will use it as my No. 1 offensive hold."

That Dan has been polishing the Whip was evident last Friday night when he used it to defeat rugged and smart Babe Wright. Once he [illegible] the hold on the Texan [illegible]

Alex MacLean, manager of Clark, declares the Dazzler has started work at Union gymnasium and will go [illegible] week.

"George knows he must win Friday's bout. A defeat or a draw, following his recent loss to Casey, would set him back considerably in his march toward title shot," MacLean said.

He had already beaten Danno and figured he was a cinch to repeat, so didn't take his training seriously.

Gov. Hurley Aids Bike Grind

Governor Charles F. Hurley has accepted an invitation to become honorary chairman of the Jefferson Club boys' bicycle marathon committee.

The governor, who as state treasurer, was guest speaker and donor of a beautiful new bicycle at the inaugural Marathon a year ago has also promised to do every thing possible to be in attendance at the June 6 race this year

Addition of the name of the chief executive of the state rounds out an outstanding committee of prominent men in public life, all of them committed to making next month's bike race one of the finest ever held

The full route of the course, with a slight change over that of a year back, will be announced in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

M. N. G. Wins 4th Prize in Hearst Rifle Shoot

By LIEUT.-COL. JESS KRUEGER

New York, May 18—Results of the third annual national musketry matches for the William Randolph Hearst trophy among National Guard regiments throughout the country were announced by Major-General Albert H. Blanding, chief of the National Guard bureau.

The team of Company C, First Infantry, Virginia National Guard was the winner of first honors with a remarkable score of 96.17 points out of a 100.

The championship team consisted of Corporal Herbert H. Smellie, [illegible] leader, Corporal Clyde P. [illegible], Private Victor C. Iacopinelli, Private Raymond G. Ohl, Jr., and Private John W. Paulett

Unit	State	Score
Co. C, 1st Inf.,	Virginia	96.17
Co. A, 142d Inf.,	Texas	93.01
Co. E, 164th Inf.,	North Dakota	92.52
Co. G, 104th Inf.,	Mass.	91.37
Co. K, 150th Inf.,	W. Virginia	87.18
Co. B, 162d Inf.,	Oregon	85.72
Co. I, 116th Inf.,	Virginia	81.14
Co. A, 101st Inf.,	Mass.	80.59
Co. B, 141st Inf.,	Texas	80.55
Co. A, 181st Inf.,	Mass.	75.56

Regular Officers

Invitations to participate in the matches as part of their training program had been issued to 80 regiments and two separate battalions of doughboy militia organizations. Each regiment was required to conduct a contest among its companies, the winning team to qualify for consideration in the national championships.

The squad firing took place on huge panorama targets representing countrysides, and were under the supervision of regular army instructors.

In the official announcement of winners, Colonel C. H. Miller, assistant to Major General Blanding made the following statement

"General Blanding deeply appreciates the support which Mr. Hearst gives to this highly valuable competition by providing awards to the winning teams."

Bronze medals are to be awarded to winning regimental teams and gold medals to national champions.

What the Stars Did

FELLER May Face Sox THURSDAY

The Indians, first of the invaders, will present, among others such former Fenway favorites as Moose Solters, Lyn Lary and Ivy Andrews. As usual, the visitors are being hailed as a dangerous pennant threat and as [illegible] are doing so well, probably because they, too have a long hospital list. They're just a half game up on the [illegible] with nine wins and eight losses on their ledger.

And that advantage might be traced to the two out of three decisions they took from the Sox in the series at Cleveland

The Tribe gained that edge without the services of Bob Feller, their 19-year-old mound marvel, who has been on the shelf with an arm wrench since his first start of the campaign.

FELLER O. K. AGAIN

There were rumors that the child prodigy would never recover, but he worked out in Cleveland yesterday, and club officials and doctors vowed the most-widely discussed salary wing in baseball was as good as ever again.

So Feller is here with the club and will see action against the Sox if Manager Steve O'Neill happens to need a relief flinger.

How TO BE A GO GETTER IN FIVE BREEZY LESSONS!

1 Remember THE LITTLE FAVORS Don't sass cops, toss bricks or hock your girl's engagement ring . . . . unless you have to!

3 Remember THE OTHER FELLOW And don't trust him alone with your girl, your job or your wallet! He's a nice guy but——!

4 Remember TO BE A GOOD LISTENER If you marry the girl, you'll find this out by yourself. If you know someone different, go get her!

5 Remember TO SEE THIS PICTURE Then ask your boss for a raise, ask your girl to marry you and if they both say 'No', see the picture again!

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

Ann Marsters, only girl handicapper, today picked CHANCE KING to win the seventh race at Narragansett Park, and ANHELATION to win the eighth.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS
$2 Win, Chance King, Narragansett 7th.
$2 Win, Anhelation, Narragansett 8th.
BANKROLL $480.90. DAY'S PLAY $4.

This is the last week of racing of the present Narragansett meeting, and will also bring to a close Miss Marsters' novel betting experiment.

Walter O'Hara has given Miss Marsters $1000, under the terms of which $500 has already been donated to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser.

The other $500 is being used by Miss Marsters as a betting stake to determine whether the races can be beaten if one is conservative and wagers on only two races a day.

Under the conditions of the O'Hara offer, the experiment will end Saturday.

Save Star From Jail Sentence

New York, May 18 (AP)—Credit Judge George Donnellan with an assist in today's scorebook of the First Ward baseball team, known as quite an outfit down around Battery place.

It seems that Eddie Laskowski, 23, was caught off base by an employe of a Greenwich street restaurant—he was climbing through the transom and pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal entry.

When he was called for sentence yesterday his teammates went to bat for him with letters to the judge explaining how tough it would be if the First Warders had to start their season without Second Baseman Laskowski.

"I know the Australian barrier is the only way to start horses," he said. "In a few weeks I leave for Europe where I will see six or seven races every day and the barrier will be used. There will be from 20 to 40 horses in the fields and they will go away in a perfect line.

"If the starters in Europe can get perfect starts, why can't we over here have the same thing? They are not superior to our American starters."

Selections for Fast Track
BEST BET—PEERLESS PAL, SEVENTH RACE

Narragansett Park, May 18—Peerless Pal, a jewel of consistency which races for Mrs. J. McGraw, is accorded a standout preference over $2500 competition in the mile and one-sixteenth of the seventh race here today.

Peerless Pal stepped a mile and one-sixteenth in 1:45 1-5—the swiftest race run by a plater at the current meeting—to lead home Redress and other $2000 platers easily in his last outing.

FIRST—Real Jam, Good Dame, Royal Bird

REAL JAM, which was barely nosed out by Laddie Stone in last race, needs only to duplicate that good effort to make amends. Contention, if any, may be furnished by GOOD DAME. The latter easily drubbed less capable opposition in her last outing but she was unable to match strides with the top selection in the above-mentioned race. ROYAL BIRD was beaten one full length by GOOD DAME in her last.

SECOND—Landscape, Adamite, Bounding Count

LANDSCAPE, dropping down from a sterling effort in $1600 company, seemingly holds a wide edge on this group of $1000 platers. In her last start the T. F. Sword owned mare was beaten [illegible] by three and one-half lengths by Tex[illegible] Starwick, Harry's Dream and Donald [illegible] The time was 1:46 [illegible] ADAMITE will be dangerous only in the event of mud. Guy [illegible]'s colorbearer won by five lengths from Yankee Skipper and others on a similar track [illegible] BOUNDING COUNT, like Adamite, is very partial to a muddy track.

THIRD—Bank Holiday, Douglas F, Winter Sport

BANK HOLIDAY [illegible] like a wild [illegible] in last race [illegible] missed [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] have the [illegible] DOUGLAS F may develop into the stoutest sort of a contender. The plater was steered all over the track in [illegible] race. WINTER SPORT [illegible] Jamaica form [illegible] the balance.

FOURTH—Highpool, Ladfield, Buster Boy

HIGHPOOL, pitted too highly in last race, needs only to duplicate previous Jamaica races to clinch top honors in this $3250 claimer. Four panels in 48 2-5 attest to fitness. LADFIELD, on the slow side during the current session, flashed marked improvement in his last time to finish fourth to Reelon, Buster Boy and Infinata. With further improvement the veteran son of Ladkin may reverse the tables on BUSTER BOY. The latter was a length in back of Re[illegible] and a half length in front of Ladfield in his last race.

FIFTH—Dixiana Entry, Blue Grotto, Cape Race

DIXIANA, which has uncovered many a sweet-running juvenile at the current session, will be represented by an entry, MY LAWYER and TICKED TIME, in this allowance number. Both of these youngsters have won brackets at the meeting, and they should prove a mighty hard combination to down for major honors.

SIXTH—Dixiana Entry, Pharloch, Gallant Eagle

GOOD CATCH and SWEEPALOT, which will run coupled for good ole Dixiana, seem capable of annexing top honors in this mile and one-sixteenth test. Both horses were pitted too highly in their recent outings. PHARLOCH passed tired horses to finish a distant second to Rudie in the Providence Handicap. On performances he is strictly the horse to fear. GALLANT EAGLE finished third in the above-mentioned race.

SEVENTH—Peerless Pal, Chance King, One Chance

If anything upsets my dope and hands PEERLESS PAL a licking it will likely be CHANCE KING. The latter stepped a mile and one-sixteenth in 1 46 2-5 to easily lead home Pompous Genie and others in his last outing. ONE CHANCE, which came from out of the clouds to drub Bahamas in last race, looms dangerous despite added poundage.

EIGHTH—Moralist, Ukraine, Anhelation

Going to give MORALIST one more chance. The W. H. Gallagher [illegible] was heavily backed to down better company [illegible] last three outings. In his initial outing of the meeting the dainty five-year-old of Crusader [illegible] his rider pleased from [illegible] of this same [illegible] UKRAINE came from far back to finish third to Cynwyd and Grandpa's Boy in her last outing. May prove a real tough nut to crack. ANHELATION is as unreliable as they come. On top form, however, he looms capable of taking the whole pot.

West Springfield Dogs Arriving

West Springfield, May 18—With Comrade Caress, leading winner of the past winter racing season in the South, topping the list of new stars, and Gin Buck among the early arrivals, the greyhound legion that will furnish the racing for the 60-day meeting which opens here the night of June 7 began checking in today.

Comrade Caress, pride of C. A. Rhodes "Caress" kennels, raced his way to 15 victories [illegible] other time he started—during the winter meeting in Florida.

NEW IMPROVEMENTS

Manager John E. Brooks announced today that a total of 35 kennels ranking ones of the winter racing had been accepted from the list of those applying.

The group includes the leading strains from the Florida and California tracks as well as Massachusetts and Connecticut kennels that have developed real competition in the two years the sport has been legalized in the Bay State.

Improvements to the Crescent Kennel Club plant, including additions, parking facilities, resurfacing of the track [illegible] for seven weeks.

New pavement [illegible] plant [illegible] what is expected to be a record-breaking [illegible] during the season [illegible] until the night of August 14.

SCHOOLING RACES

Listed among the old favorites along with Gin Buck is Bad Vida, winner of the $2000 Sportsman's Sweepstakes last summer and ready to defend [illegible] in the second running of the event planned as one of the high spots of the coming meet.

Schooling races in preparation for the season will be held at night starting next Monday and continuing nightly except Sundays until the opening of the season.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Though secondary in importance to winning the New England title and the all-expense-paid trip to Atlanta, Ga., to compete in the national tournament, contestants in the Boston wing's outdoor model flying meet in July at Franklin Field will make their usual and untiring bid for new flight records.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
(Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (coin wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

First name ....

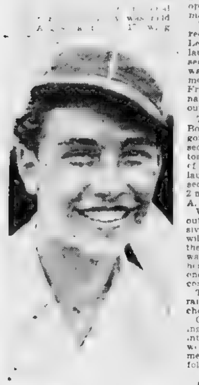
City .... State ....

My Age Is Now ....(Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

F[illegible] of longer flight times, either local or na-[illegible] model builder glow with pride and [illegible] times more to be desired than the prizes [illegible] was held [illegible] gives Boston Birdmen their first opportunity to better these marks.



LEIGHTON WEBB

They are as follows: Glider record 6 min 2 sec. held by Leighton Webb, Rochester; hand-launched stick model, 11 min. 5 sec. held by Kenneth Lane, Milwaukee, and R. O. G. cabin model, 11 min. 1 sec. held by Frank Kiewicz, Detroit. The last named became the 1936 national outdoor champion.

The best times established by Boston members in these categories are: Glider, 5 min. 48 1-5 sec., William Semchenko, Boston, established at the Playstead of Franklin Park in 1935, hand-launched stick model, 3 min. 10 sec., and R. O. G. cabin model, 2 min. 48 sec., both held by Frank A. Barrett, Jr., Brighton.

While the records set by the out-of-town Birdmen are impressive, they CAN be beaten and it will not be surprising, providing the weather is as favorable as it was for last year's national meet here if New England boys better one or more of the marks in the contest on July 12.

Contestants, who are registering for this year's classic, will be interested in the times which were made in the wing tournament last year. They are as follows:

GLIDER EVENT

Andrew P. Minkus, Easthampton, 1 min., 38 4-5 sec.; Bruno P. Marchi, Medford, 1 min., 31 3-5 sec.; Frank A. Barrett, Brighton, 1 min., 29 1-5 sec.; Leslie Woodman, Everett, 1 min., 1 3-5 sec., and Gordon E. Cain, Mattapan, 1 min., 3-4 sec.

STICK EVENT

Frank A. Barrett, 3 min., 10 sec.; Arthur E. Sampson, Dorchester, 3 min., 5 sec.; Constantine Pappas, Dorchester, 2 min., 50 4-5 sec.; George Hoell, Medford, 2 min., 36 2-5 sec., and Robert B. Shea, Brighton, 2 min., 35 1-5 sec.

CABIN EVENT

Torrey L. Capo, Quincy, 2 min. 45 1-5 sec.; Leslie B. Stuart, Cranston, R. I., 2 min. 45 1-5 sec.; Robert B. Shea, 2 min. 8 1-5 sec.; Leslie Woodman, 1 min. 55 sec., and Frank Barrett, 1 min. 51 1-5 sec.

The models and the specifications for this year's derby will be the same as last year except for a difference in the weight rules involving the stick and cabin planes. Under the new rules the models must weigh one ounce for each 50 square inches of wing area and the planes will be weighed in without the rubber motors.

Several birdmen who competed last year will be ineligible for the meet on July 12. These include Frank Barrett, Torrey Capo and Bruno Marchi. Frank and Torrey are ineligible as past champions and Bruno is over 21, the maximum age limit for contestants.

All other [illegible] are eligible to take part. To do so they should send to wing headquarters for the free manuals, containing a list of prizes, specifications of models, rules governing the meet and entry blanks. A three-cent stamp should be enclosed with their request.

[illegible] spouse a social-climber? [illegible] listen in tonight (WBZ) at [illegible] p. m. to [illegible] for the fall [illegible] Brown and [illegible] Lowe [illegible] the husbands and wives of [illegible] who have [illegible] northward.

Too husands will discuss the wives who whisk all important papers out of sight in their cleaning and the wives who carpet their homes with hairpins.

For a bit of local entertainment this evening (WAAB) at 8 15 p. m., Roy Harlow will direct the Metropolitan Singers on the next step of the Boston success ladder. Mary Nevery, soprano, and Walter Kidder, concert baritone, are the head lined soloists.

Does all work and no play make Jack a dull boy? Does too much play, or rather the public recreation kind of play make Jack a pampered youth? It's a question, a question to be discussed tonight (WBZ) at 10 00 p. m. by the 22nd National Recreation Congress. John G. Winant, second vice-president of the association, George Hjelte, recreation superintendent in Los Angeles, and Otto T. Mallery, Playground president of Philadelphia, will take part in the discussion, "IsPublic Recreation Pampering Youth?"

Lou Holtz has just returned from a long tour in England, loaded with new stories and jokes. Ben Bernie and All the Lads have persuaded him to be the rare guest with the rare performance on their program WBZ) at 9 00 p. m.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

The final program of the "Irish Echoes" under the direction of Terry O'Toole will be broadcast tonight (WAAB) at 7 15 p. m. During his broadcast, Terry will sing the lovely old ballad of Ireland called "Terence's Farwell." Helen MacCarthy Brown, mezzo-soprano, will offer "Macushla" and Buddy Goodhue, 13-year-old singer from West Quincy, will sing "Ireland Must Be Heaven."

That bargain marriages sometimes merit the trial is shown in Aunt Jenny's Real Life Story program (WEEI) this afternoon at 1 45 p. m. The tale tells of the young school teacher, Virginia Waters. Disillusioned in love, she marries a man whom she supposes to be wealthy. She finds that not only is he not wealthy, but that he has three children as well by a previous marriage. Although feeling duped, she is attracted by the children and stays on to educate them. As time passes, she grows quite fond of the arrangement and learns that she loves her new husband.

Nick Lucas, radio singer for the "Watch the Fun Go By" program (WEEI) at 9 p. m., recently won a Federal Court battle over a song written by two Pennsylvania youths. He didn't even have to put up a defense. He celebrated his victory by rendering, sans guitar, "Tip Toe Through the Tulips" in the marble corridor of the courthouse at the request of six women jurors who sat on the case.

HEAR HIM TONIGHT!

HERE ARE THE FACTS ABOUT THIS GREAT ENCYCLOPEDIA

It Is Modern, Complete and Thoroughly Reliable

One of the five great Encyclopedias of the world, it has been completely revised from A to Z by a staff of eminent educators and specialists under the personal direction of Dean Walter Miller, Professor Emeritus of the University of Missouri, to bring EVERY TOPIC right up to date. The full set contains accurate authoritative, encyclopedia-worthy fact and information on every subject in the entire range of man's knowledge.

It Is Illustrated

More than 5000 modern drawings, diagrams, photographs have been used throughout the 15 volumes to dramatically illustrate and further clarify hundreds of topics in science, geography, history, industry, arts, education. Sixteen full-page colored maps of the world are included.

15 Volumes

The entire work is complete in fifteen great volumes, which can be obtained on the Boston Evening American's convenient and amazingly inexpensive BOOK-A-WEEK plan.

About the Bindings—the Size

A choice of two bindings is offered; the sensationally economical Popular Blue Binding and the thrillingly beautiful Luxury Lifetime Binding. Both bindings were designed by Leonard Mounteney, internationally famous bookbinder; both bindings are made to withstand constant usage; contents, paper, text, illustration and size are identical. Full encyclopedia size, 6⅜"x9⅜".

Paintings Shown at Jordan's Win Prizes

C. S. THOMPSON JOHN BENSON ELMER GREENE SEARS GALLAGHER

Boston Evening American Photos

Here is Cameron S. Thompson, vice-president of Jordan Marsh Company, presenting $250 to Artist John P. Benson of Kittery, Me., whose marine painting, "The Storm," won first award in a Jordan Marsh Art Week exhibition. Also in the group are Elmer Westley Greene, Jr., of Boston and Sears Gallagher of West Roxbury. They each won $100 and a medal. Greene's prize painting, a portrait of Mrs. Reginald Adams Kibbe, is visible at rear.

3 Artists Win Jordan Awards

Their paintings voted most popular in the spring exhibition of New England art sponsored by Jordan Marsh Company, three artists received cash awards and gold medals at a ceremony in the executive offices of the department store today.

To John P. Benson of Kittery, Me., went $250 in cash and a medal for his marine painting, "The Storm," which was voted not only most popular in its class but received the highest number of votes in the exhibit.

The most popular portrait was that of "Mrs. Reginald Adams Kibbe," done by Elmer Westley Greene, Jr., of Boston. He also received $100 in cash and a gold medal.

Army Dental Bill Spurred in House

Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, May 18—Enthusiastic support of many House members was thrown behind the drive to enact the pending Collins bill which would provide an adequate number of dentists for the U. S. Army.

Introduced by Representative Collins (D) of Mississippi, at the behest of the American dental association, the bill is pending before the House military affairs committee. Chairman Hill, of Alabama, predicted early passage of the measure.

The bill provides one dentist for each 500 men in the army similar to that in the navy department.

NEW SALEM HONOR TO LINCOLN JUNE 17

By CHARLES N. WHEELER

(Special to the Boston Evening American)

Chicago, May 18—Final dedication of the restored village of New Salem, Abraham Lincoln's Illinois home in the plastic years when his great character was taking form amid primitive surroundings, will take place June 17.

Besides formal exercises and orations by Governor Horner and other Lincoln authorities, the ceremonies will be climaxed with a gorgeous pageant, "The Salem Years," written by Mrs. Margaret Cheaney of Petersburg, Ill.

Reserved for this climactic event in the years of partial dedications of the restorations is also one of the world's great love stories—the courtship of Ann Rutledge by the gangling conqueror of the Clary Hill gang.

BEAUTIFUL, TRAGIC LOVE

Essayists, playwrights and poets have vied in the effort to paint this beautiful and tragic love of the young Lincoln, who nearly lost his mind when she died.

Wandering through the woods of the bluff overlooking the winding Sangamon, he could not bear the thought of the rain falling on her grave, marked to this day by a simple boulder in Petersburg Cemetery, hard by.

And the last of the 16 restored cabins to be dedicated next month will be the Rutledge Tavern, the spacious "sitting room" of which will be found refurnished just as it was in the days when the awkward and bashful Lincoln boy won the love of the tavern keeper's beautiful daughter, only to have death claim her before he could lead her to the altar.

FIRST FAMILY

It was James Rutledge who settled at New Salem with his family shortly after John M. Cameron had Reuben S. Harrison survey and lay out the town of New Salem in 1829.

Cameron and Rutledge built the first dam across the Sangamon at this point and erected a grist mill. As the Clary Hill section grew Rutledge, who had built a log house near the mill, turned his "residence" into a tavern.

The two cabins are the residences of Isaac Gulihur and Alexander Trent. Little is known of these two pioneers except that they were members of Lincoln's company in the Blackhawk War in 1832, and were ever ready to follow wherever Abe Lincoln led the way.

PAGEANT KELSO HOLLOW

Much that is known today of Jack Kelso comes down through the years by word of mouth from the pioneers to their descendants. It is known, however, that Kelso was a first rate man with a gun and a fish pole. But he also had familiarized himself somewhere in the east with the classics and while he and Abe hunted in the woods or lured the wary bass from the lily beds of the Sangamon, he fired Lincoln's mind with that burning desire to KNOW that carried him to the heights of human reasoning. It was Kelso who told him about Shakespeare and Robert Burns, according to one tradition.

And so in the hollow named after Jim Kelso the ceremonies will be brought to a climax on June 17 with the pageant in three episodes, with the great and tragic love story running through the closing scenes. Mrs. Henry Pond of Petersburg will be in charge of the general program.

The New Salem Park which has been expanded into about 200 acres, was made possible by William Randolph Hearst, who purchased the site of the village and later deeded it to the state to be preserved forever as a national shrine.

College Dean Says Girls Lack Spirit

Lincoln, Neb., May 18 (AP)—The modern college girl lacks fire and spirit, in the opinion of Dr. Louise Pound, professor of English language at Nebraska University.

Dr. Pound, sister of Roscoe Pound, former dean of the Harvard Law School, recalled today when co-eds always were fighting or plotting something. Today's maidens, she said, tend to be disinterested in everything. She said:

"It is most discouraging to have that young lady in my front row applying lipstick the entire period during my class. In reading some beautiful poem, when I am trying to keep myself from being moved to tears, or am trying to move my audience to tears I find it a fascinating distraction to watch this girl smearing her mouth, oblivious."

Take Kisses Lose Teeth, M. D. Warns

Atlanta, May 18 (AP)—Kiss often and promiscuously and lose your teeth, warns Dr. Marvin M. Harris of the Georgia state health department.

And if you want case history he can give it to you.

Four of six girls engaged in kissing games at a recent party developed a mouth infection, he said.

Solve Your Problem In New Encyclopedia

There undoubtedly has been a time when you've been sitting at home and someone in the family popped a question.

A discussion followed and you probably wished you could solve the problem immediately.

Or perhaps on some other occasion you were writing a school paper, or a review for your literary club, or a speech to be given before some organization and a problem came up that had to be solved before you could finish your work.

But whatever the occasion there was an urgent need of finding the correct answer immediately and in authoritative, lucid and brief form. If you had a set of reference books you'd be in luck.

And that's just where the Boston Evening American's amazing offer of the 15-volume Standard American Encyclopedia comes in.

If you have this set on your book shelf you can have all the answers you seek in just a matter of seconds. And what's more the answers will be right up-to-the-minute in detail and authenticity.

This set of encyclopedia should be in every home especially since the Boston Evening American makes its acquisition so easy. Now here's all there is to do:

Clip the coupons which appear every day on page 2 of the Boston Evening American in connection with this sensational book offer. When you get six coupons consecutively numbered bring them to one of the Greater Boston redemption stations, listed in the advertisement printed daily concerning the book offer.

Then, with 44 or 68 cents, you can place the coupons on a counter and receive your volume. Four books have already been made available but it's not too late to start. The only difference in the price is that two kinds of bindings are offered. You have your choice, but either is a bargain. Come and see for yourself.

CHICAGO ADMEN HEAR M'CARTHY

With that theme, L. J. McCarthy, director of marketing for Hearst magazines, stressed to some 200 Chicago advertising managers and directors here the importance of advertising via the printed word.

More than ever, said McCarthy, editors and publishers are making certain of the veracity of every advertisement.

"Thirty years ago Good Housekeeping Magazine established the then unheard of principle of absolutely guaranteeing any product it advertised, with the promise to refund money to a purchaser who found the product not as advertised."

Good Housekeeping had to turn down thousands of dollars in business, McCarthy went on, because it found that products of prospective advertisers were not as represented.

BRIDGE AND APPROACHES—Mass. U. S. Works Program Grade Crossing Project No. WPGS 263, Town of BRAINTREE. Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Public Works. Notice to Contractors: Sealed proposals for constructing a steel plate girder bridge under the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad and a section of highway including about 8940 square yards of roadway surfacing and about 2180 square yards of base course for sidewalks, consisting of standard bituminous macadam will be received by the State Department of Public Works at its office, 100 Nashua Street, Boston, Mass., until 12 o'clock noon (D.S.T.), of Tuesday, June 1, 1937, and at that place and time will be publicly opened and read. Plans, specifications and other pertinent data may be examined at the office of said Department. A pamphlet containing the Itemized Proposal with Special Provisions may be obtained upon payment of a charge of $10.00, which amount will be returned only to those who submit a formal bid for the project on the form provided in said pamphlet and within the time stipulated. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check payable to the Department for the amount of $5500.00 or other security satisfactory to the Department. A bid bond will not be accepted as security. The check or security must not be included in the sealed envelope with the proposal, but must be delivered to the Department Business Agent, who will give a proper voucher for the deposit. Special attention of bidders is called the minimum rates of wages prescribed by the State Department of Labor and Industries in accordance with the requirements of Chapter 461 of the Acts of 1935, and set forth in a schedule of minimum wages, copies of which may be obtained from the office of said Department. Notwithstanding the foregoing rates, the Contractor shall in every case pay at least the minimum wage rates per hour of $0.50, $0.75, and $1.20 for unskilled, intermediate and skilled labor respectively as prescribed in the Special Provisions of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads. The name and address of the local registration office of the United States Re-employment Service, from which the employee lists for this contract shall be obtained will be supplied later, but said office will be in the general locality of the work. The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, or to accept the one deemed best for the Commonwealth. By: WILLIAM F. CALLAHAN, Commissioner of Public Works, Boston, Mass., May 18, 1937.

What About the Wagner Act?

THE PEOPLE of the United States, to whom industrial peace is vitally important, are entirely mystified by the continuing parade of labor strikes.

Why do labor leaders continue to call strikes, instead of using the Wagner Act?

The Wagner Act was frankly enacted FOR LABOR.

If that does not mean it should take the place of strikes, and enable labor to get what it wants WITHOUT STRIKING, what in the world DOES it mean?

THE nation as a whole accepted the Supreme Court's approval of the Wagner Act as a WAY OUT of the strike problem.

Even employers, who were afraid of it AND HAD A RIGHT TO BE, felt the ultimate benefits would outweight the possible injury if strikes were PREVENTED.

Why, then, are strikes continuing in spite of the Wagner Act, which was labor's own instrument for making strikes UNNECESSARY?

Current labor disputes center almost entirely upon the right of collective bargaining, and the determination of labor groups privileged to conduct the bargaining.

The Wagner Act was trimmed to fit both holes.

But instead of using this machinery, created at its demand, labor is STILL STRIKING.

THE American people would really like to KNOW WHY.

They are becoming more convinced every day that somewhere in the background of this picture is a sinister influence that WANTS STRIKES, wants to keep industry in turmoil, wants to keep workers idle and restless, wants to deprive the people of necessary goods and services.

They are becoming convinced, too, that COMPULSORY ARBITRATION IS THE ONLY WORKABLE SOLUTION OF THE LABOR PROBLEM.

A Medal for Merrill

DICK MERRILL, with four ocean flights behind him and a host of other noteworthy achievements in the air, ought to have the Congressional Medal of Honor.

His remarkable flight of the Atlantic with Jack Lambie will be recognized in the future as an outstanding event in the history of aviation.

He has given America a HEAD START toward world leadership in the great field of commercial aviation.

Let him have the satisfaction of carrying the token of the nation's appreciation through the rest of his life.

End Floods

NEW ENGLAND, its rivers swollen by recent rains, is once more flood-conscious.

This should be a warning. The six States that comprise this section must abandon the let-the-other-fellow-do-it attitude and work together to end floods.

Months ago the Federal Government offered to supply two-thirds of the money for a series of reservoirs if the New England States raised the other third.

There followed a period of unpardonable delay. Vermont objected to the reservoirs on the ground that they would damage her scenery. Various disputes involving the amounts each State should pay arose.

The result is that New England is no more safe from floods than it was two years ago. And no one can say definitely whether the Federal Government's offer still holds.

The time to try to control rivers is NOW.

Prosperity

A "GOLDEN AGE" for the Port of Boston is predicted by Irving T. Sorge, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's foreign trade committee.

"The port and the stake of New England industries in overseas commerce are definitely in ascendency," says Mr. Sorge.

That is good news, coming, as it does, on the eve of National Maritime Day, Saturday, May 22.

It should, however, be only the beginning. Through improved harbor facilities, bigger piers and accommodations for the larger liners, Boston should aggressively campaign for the prosperity that belongs to her as this continent's nearest city to Europe.

With the co-operation of the new Maritime Commission, headed by the able, former Bostonian, Joseph P. Kennedy, we can make every year a better, more fruitful year. That should be our aim.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 18—A medical man in San Francisco writes me there are more victims of anosmia than almost anyone realizes. Anosmia is the medical term for those afflicted with a lack of smell. With some it is congenital, and with others often the result of chronic sinus affection.

O. O. McIntyre

Those victimized with color blindness, achromatopsia, generally become aware of it as they mature but those with anosmia seldom discover the fact for the reason that it does not reflect on anyone but the unfortunate individual. Genius is often so touched. Maeterlinck, Goethe and Swinburne.

Almost everybody has had dinner or lunch in a restaurant with someone who has difficulty in reaching a decision as just what he wishes to eat. Finally after an embarrassed interval he will usually turn to the waiter and say "O, I'll just take the same."

Actually he never knows whether he has humming bird wings or corned beef and cabbage. Some diagnosticians the people who use such expressions as "I'll take the same," "I really don't care what I eat," or "I merely eat to live," are usually anosmiatic. The only time I've ever felt I'd welcome anosmia is when passing the Fulton Fish market.

Another frequent affliction which many endure with patient resignation, I hear, is a buzzing in the inner ear. It is sometimes a prelude to deafness but not always. It sometimes goes on for a lifetime and nothing can be done about it. Lord Northcliffe was so afflicted and so were Cecil Rhodes and Cyril Maud. Many soldiers under trench fire acquired the buzz during the World War and it never left them. At times victims have fits of melancholia, but that is about all.

The one person I knew with color blindness was the late Arthur Somers Roche and he never liked to admit it. For instance he would if shown some color inquire "It is brown, isn't it?" And when told it was green would carry it to a better light and say, "Oh yes, I see."

Most private libraries are cold and formal in the manner of art galleries—so much so the word library has become anathema with architects who build the fine city mansions and elaborate country homes. Instead, the library is now called the "book room," and the effort is to make it cozy, indeed to make it the most alluring in a large establishment. With comfortable, deep-cushioned chairs, floor lamps and a huge open fire.

The tight-lipped aloofness of city dwellers is always a puzzle to those more or less attuned to the garrulity of a small town. For six years I have been a fellow passenger on the apartment elevator three or four times a week with a neighboring tenant. Often we are the only occupants, and now and then we catch ourselves studying one another appraisingly. Some day I suppose one of us will crack the ice, swing off into a waltz, and learn that we both came from the same crotch-of-the-creek.

One of Irvin Cobb's choice, well-told tales concerns his embryonic era in New York, when he lived in an apartment house on Riverside Drive in the 100's. He and Mrs. Cobb were on a voyage and were assigned as table mates of a New York couple they found interesting. They were together most of the voyage, sunning on deck, walking and the like. Before disembarking they thought it well to exchange addresses so they could see each other when they returned to the United States.

Thus it developed that one couple lived directly over the other at the same Riverside address, and had for five years. O. Henry once wrote a short story based on a similar episode in University Place.

George White is said to have told intimates his theatrical producing days are over. He is through. Costs of presenting his type of entertainment, along with the labor salary demands back stage, brought about his decision. With Ziegfeld gone, Carroll in Hollywood and White quitting, it would seem finis has been definitely written to the girl and beauty revues.

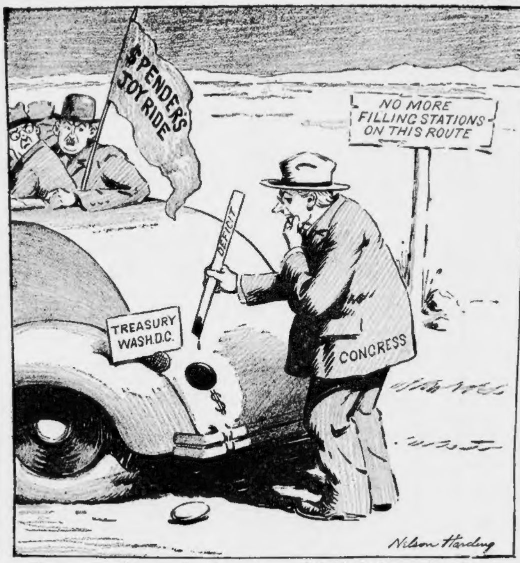
Perhaps some food expert can tell us why raw oysters taste best standing at an oyster bar. In cities and towns adjacent to oyster beds no one thinks of eating an oyster, save at a stand up counter.

Meredith Nicholson, who, like all inlanders, goes on a sea food bust in New York, called my attention to this gastronomic quirk recently. We visited two bars in mid-town and they were packed three rows deep, yet in some of the sea food restaurants we passed there were many empty tables.

Since then I have learned that all true oyster lovers invariably satiate their appetites at the oyster bars. It would be a good topic for one of Julian Street's estimable essays.

The Last Mile?

By Nelso
Harding



They've had a wild and costly ride,
They've gone both far and fast,
All filling stations passed.

A double check-up of the tank
Discloses that, alas!
They're facing the unpleasant fact
Of running out of gas.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

All these theories about the cause of crime—people going wrong through poverty, hardship, bad breeding and environment . . . Doubtless they're all contributory. But personally I believe that nine-tenths of our trouble is due to boredom.

Elsie Robinson

What does a man need to keep him happy and well-behaved? He needs a fuller and a wider life.

It need not be a rich life, nor a comfortable nor safe life. It may, to the contrary, be hard driven, uncomfortable and dangerous—such a rough existence as our pioneer fathers faced with zest.

But it must hold, and it must give, those things upon which the poorest pioneer could count with certainty—change and challenge, pride and purpose, a sense of importance.

A life that means something . . . that makes a man mean something . . . that is the first requisite of Goodness.

But consider the life which the average modern citizen leads. Your own, perhaps! Despite the gorgeous trappings of the Machine Age — the glitter and clash, whirl and dash—human existence has never been as colorless, as empty of individual purpose and adventure, as it is today.

LIKE MACHINES

We have profits—yes But where is our pride? Where is our place in the sun? Just yesterday man made the Machine. Already the Machine has reduced man to the status of a standardized gadget.

The poorest cobbler in your grandfather's time, the simplest housewife, got more out of life than the typical toiler of 1937.

There was a reason—those workers were complete craftsmen. They made their products from start to finish. Viewing those products, they knew the deep, soul-satisfying pride of creators.

Not one modern worker out of a hundred knows such pride. We no longer have full-sized jobs to feed the mind, stimulate self-confidence—give tang to life. We are "PIECE WORKERS" . . . mechanized puppets.

Youth that once raced, full-blooded, on the Covered Wagon Trail, now wears its dreams away—bending, dull-lidded, over some "assembly line"; huddled, heavy-hearted, over some sweatshop machine.

WE NEED DANGER

Piece workers — mechanized puppets—from dawn till dark, from dark till dawn, our lives move in a regimented routine. Nothing new . . . nothing different. No change . . . no challenge. Not tomorrow . . . nor tomorrow . . . nor tomorrow. Day by day, bit by bit, over the same ground, through the same motions, over and over and over.

We, who were once men, are now gadgets—a little better than tack hammers—not quite as valuable as spark plugs.

Day by day . . . bit by bit . . . over and over and over . . . with darkness deepening within us . . . and the emptiness widening . . . and the boredom spreading like a blight.

Until, perhaps, something gives way! The frustrated spirit rebels . . . demands release and expression. Then a trigger snaps . . . or a till is tapped . . . or a woman's name lands in the gutter.

Steady? Yes—too steady! Life wasn't meant to be so steady . . . bodies weren't built to endure it. Life was meant to give. Bodies were built to feel — danger and delight, challenge and change, purpose and pride. Take these away and spirits are bored . . . grow blank . . . GO BAD.

'Yure's Truly'

By Winston Norman

Mr. John L. Lewis,
Sect. of Strikes,
Wash. D. C.

Dear Mr. Lewis:

I am riteing you this leter becauze I am all mixed up in the head. I do not unnerstand about Human Rights vs. Property Rights, so if you are not busy with a setdown strike, I wisht you would set down and explane.

What I want to know, is my wife Human? This question come up on acct. we had so many Strikes in our town lately. Everybody struck becauze they says Human Rights comes before Property Rights, the same way that Schmeling's Rights come before Joe Louis's Rights.

I ast my brother-in-law Jake about it, but he didn't help me none. "Jake," I says to him, "when it comes to Human or Property, whose rights is wrong?"

"The other guy's," says Jake. "If your wife and kids is hungry, that's human. You got the human right to hit some guy with a black-jack & take his money away."

"But my goodness," I says, "what about the poor fellow that I hit on the head? Don't he have no rights?"

"No," says Jake, "because his head and his money is Property. Your stummick is Human. It comes first."

"But looky here," I says, "when that poor fellow wakes up without no money, don't he begin to get hungry and have some Human Rights too?"

"Sure," says Jake, "he's got the right to crack somebody else on the head and take their money, and so on till everybody cracks everybody else on the head and we got Human Rights all over America."

If Jake is right, it looks like this Human Rights thing is a sort of Nail Headacke, but if Jake is wrong we would like to hear from you, Mr. Lewis.

Yure's truly,

Modern Life Insurance

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Life insurance companies of America pay out a quarter of a million dollars per hour. Policies in force total $104,000,000,000. One out of every two persons in the country is a policy holder. Seven percent of the world's population lives in America, yet Americans own 70 per cent of the world's life insurance.

Edwin C. Hill

These are facts of interest, along with dozens of others, flashed by Life Insurance Week, observed from May 17 to May 22.

There is nothing more human than life insurance, both in its urgent practical significance and its derivation. And nothing more calculated to make a man want to jump out of a window when somebody starts dealing him actuarial figures about how much so much would amount to in so many years, months and days, allowing for the supplementary dividend clause, minus the collateral increment, as explained in table 36, which doesn't apply on policy 368907-2869 because of the reversion clause—and the like of that, away on past train time.

WILL ROGERS NEEDED

The trouble with the smart young men who sell life insurance is that they know too much. Each lad ought to take along with him a human step-down transformer, a sort of Will Rogers philosopher to filter out the human essence of such vast elaborate complexities.

Merely wise, and not necessarily erudite, men have inspired and helped start all sorts of magnificent human enterprise, and then the detail technicians came along and made it workable.

When it is working, we take it too much for granted. We know that our automatic oil burner responds to the touch of a tiny lever on the thermostat, and that is just about all we do know about it. If we started exploring the scientific technique of metallurgy and physics which make this possible, we could spend a lifetime, and then not master the story. So with life insurance.

A loyal friend of the American Revolution and a friend of Ben Franklin was the English parson, Richard Price, who lived from 1723 to 1791. Elizur Wright is known as "the father of life insurance," but it was Richard Price, philosopher and mathematician, who inspired Wright and who sunk the first deep caissons on which all modern life insurance theory are based.

He solved the mortality and experience tables, originated the old-age pension plan in its first practical actuarial form, and was author of the level premium.

He was also a friend of Thomas Jefferson and Tom Paine, and the Boston Tea Party is said to have been his idea. All of which rates a bit of patriotic high stepping during insurance week and a low bow to the almost forgotten Dr. Price, disclosed by modern research as one of the most remarkable men of his age.

He was a metaphysician and theologian, but, like Franklin, keenly interested and widely informed in the physical sciences, an intimate friend of Joseph Priestly, the great English chemist. His pamphlets on the American War first brought him fame in England. He preached to tremendous congregations and was offered the post of private secretary to the premier when Lord Shelburne acceded to power.

TRIUMPH OF BRAINS

Price was in correspondence with men of affairs in America, like Franklin and Jefferson, and yet their concerns covered a vast range of abstract theory. The slow-going packets carried back and forth long dissertations on the human soul, free will, the population of England, the permutations and combinations of the calculus as touching on health and longevity, civil liberty, "materialism and necessity" and even infant mortality.

Just suppose that Messrs. Farley, Morgenthau and Ickes, taking names at random, were in a correspondence battle with Stanley Baldwin, Sir Walter Runciman and Neville Chamberlain on Marcel Proust, determinism, indirect cell division and the transmission of acquired characteristics, and that each of them sat up half the night by a wood fire writing with a quill pen. That would not be a strained comparison.

But we know, of course, that modern specialization puts each of us in his own little corner, and it would be impossible for the wisest and most learned of us to surround the cosmos as did these famous letter writers and philosophers of an earlier century. There would be a thousand challenges and qualifications to the above comparison.

But this much we can sluice out of it all—a whale of a lot of good brains have gone into building the great structure of life insurance.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

Our Ambassador to Germany, Mr. Dodd, has found something in America that is as extinct as the dodo—a billionaire.

He said in a letter that he "was told" that a billionaire was ready to back a Fascist coup in the United States.

Dr. Dodd should have notified the Internal Revenue Department about this—it would want to know immediately the name of that man, who has evidently escaped its tax claws.

In detailing some anti-New Deal decisions of the court, Dr. Dodd says:

"In every case the will of the people was defeated."

The function of the Supreme Court, some good soul should tell Dr. Dodd, is not to follow the election returns, but to interpret the will of the people AS IT IS EMBODIED IN THE CONSTITUTION.

The Supreme Court is NOT a political but a JUDICIAL body.

The homing instinct of animals and birds would indicate that there is a deeper mind at work in the world than the mere reasoning, observing, conscious mind.

Here is the case of Jane, a four-year-old foxhound. She got lost in a hunt in Tennessee, but she found her way home alone to Bluff City, 125 miles from the spot where she was reported missing. Jane was two weeks and two days on the way.

Even if this can be explained by the sense of smell, it still remains a triumph for the secret wisdom of the senses and the subconscious mind. We have lost much of this wisdom in our ascent to acquired knowledge, which is so often an enemy of our surer-footed instincts.

The coronation of George the Sixth, the $7,500,000,000 rearmament program and the imperial conference have raised the prestige of England enormously.

Great Britain is the greatest and successful salesman in the world. Her most attractive showcases are Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Her princes have for many decades high-pressured the rest of the world by gala visits.

The amazing ability of England to sell herself to the world hae been in evidence since the age of Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth, during whose reigns England rose to the first rank of world powers.

History will record that England had, in the main, a good line of goods to sell. And the world has BOUGHT. Wherever England has gone she has raised the summit of civilization—even among those peoples who rejected her rule, America and Ireland.

The scenery of life changes, but from the results of archaeological excavations it would seem that our fundamental activities are always about the same.

University of Pennsylvania explorers have discovered that in Mesopotamia the people painted pictures the equal of those artists who came five thousand years later and that they played on all sorts of musical instruments—but not the saxophone.

They also hoarded gold in those days, which would indicate the existence of such up-to-date novelties as depressions.

That's That

There is no exaggeration in the statement of Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that "the administration of parole systems in all too many of our states approaches a national scandal." He puts it mildly when he says "parole today is becoming one of the major menaces of our country. Through its misapplication, convicts are freed with little or nor supervision and often with no sound reason for release."

When you consider the time, effort and tax money spent in rounding up, prosecuting and convicting criminals, the carelessness with which so many of them are released is appalling. Law enforcement agencies function to put a desperado behind the bars where society is safe from his depredations. People, reading that he has been locked up for a long term of years, breathe a sigh of relief. The next thing they know, he is out, having served only a fraction of the sentence given him by the court, and has committed another and worse crime.

If the decent, law-abiding people of this country are to have any degree of security in their lives and the possession of the property they have acquired, they must be protected against the criminal wolves who roam the nation. To get this protection, laws must be enforced and wrong-doers must be punished. Almost everyone believes in an intelligent, sensibly administered parole system. But as Director Hoover says, "It is necessary to distill the blathering of the sentimentalists and the cruelty of the non-humanitarian into a clarified viewpoint on paroles." There must be common sense in the parole system.

To argue that every criminal should be paroled is as silly as to contend that clemency never should be granted. Too many parole systems now are operated on the theory that every criminal is entitled to parole. Repeaters whose records show they are habitual criminals are paroled just the same as if they were first offenders. Such a policy is idiotic. It does not promote the reform of offenders. It actually encourages crime.

William E. Dodd, our ambassador to Germany, seems to have started something when he wrote to several Senators, appealing for support of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court packing plan, and said he had been told that a "man who owns nearly a billion dollars" is ready to support and of course control a dictatorship in the United States.

Senator King of Utah thinks "the letter shows Mr. Dodd should be recalled." Senator Van Nuys of Indiana says, "we ought to bring Mr. Dodd home to give him an opportunity to disclose any information he has to the Senate." The fact that these Senators are Democrats, members of the majority party, lifts the controversy above the level of a political squabble.

The amusing thing about the Dodd letter is his notion that packing the Supreme Court would safeguard the country against a Fascist dictatorship. Many people are against the packing plan because it appears to be a move toward dictatorship. Once the independence of the Supreme Court is destroyed, the last line of defense against Fascism, Communism and other isms which offend the Constitution is gone.

If the people of Italy and Germany want a Fascist system of government, that is their business. If the people of Russia want a system of Communism or state Socialism, that is their business. The American people have seen enough of the workings of such systems to know they do not want anything of the kind. For either means dictatorship and tyranny and destruction of every kind of freedom which Americans love.
